Canadian Dollar Won't be Pegged

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons today the government doesn't intend to peg the Canadian dollar and it will remain a "floating dollar."

He rejected Opposition charges that there is a dollar crisis and said it should stop preaching gloom and doom.

He gave few other details to opposition MPs who sought to know how much money the government intends to borrow abroad to support the dollar, where the money will come from, and at what cost.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark flailed Chretien's brief statement Tuesday night announcing the intension to borrow as vague and said the finance minister should have come to the Commons to answer questions.

Chretien's statement came after market's closed with the dollar hitting its lowest point in 40 years.

Chretien told Clark he will announce in the next few days details of the amount the government will draw from a $1.5 billion standby credit arranged last October with chartered banks. He rejected demands for an early budget.

Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens charged that Chretien had misled the House. The Bank of Canada had put out $65 million Monday and $200 million Tuesday buying Canadian dollars.

OTTAWA — The federal government set a spending target today of $48.8 billion for the financial year starting April 1, an increase of $4.35 billion or 9.8 cents on every dollar spent in the current year.

To keep within the target total, the government assumes that federal departments and agencies will not actually use $1 billion for which the government is seeking parliamentary spending authority. It also includes a maximum of $1.55 billion for the supplementary spending requests that usually come later in the year.

Robert Andras, treasury board president, repeated to the Commons that the government intends to hold its spending in the year ending March 31 to $44.45 billion.

The amount of spending tabled today is $48.25 billion. The supplementary requests will come later.

Spending on social welfare programs is forecast to rise by $1.12 billion to a level of $9.18 billion. Of this increase, $373 million is to compensate the provinces for lower than expected revenue from the additional income tax powers given them last year in return for their assuming more responsibility for welfare programs.

Andras warned that there is "nothing sacred" about social programs and indicated some effort will be made to control this spending.

"They have been revamped before and they will be revamped again," he told the Commons.

With nearly one million unemployed in January — about 8.3 per cent of the national work force — another $506 million is provided for "special employment initiatives." The government is spending more than $550 million on direct make-work programs this year.

Andras said the government is determined to keep its rate of increase for spending to less than the nominal growth rate of gross national product (GNP), or total output of the economy. Treasury officials said, however, that they do not yet know what the nominal GNP increase, which includes inflation, was for the 1977 calendar year.

A real economic growth rate of about five per cent, double that achieved in 1977, and a slowing in inflation to six per cent from its current nine per cent rate have been assumed for this year.

Andras said the government is not relying on its own spending to stimulate the economy. The recovery should be led by the private sector.

But he said the government "resisted pressure . . . to cut savagely federal programs and to apply some rigid form of fiscal rigor." The government has already cut as much fat from its operations as possible, he said.

The government decided not to abolish or limit cost-of-living increases built into a variety of social welfare programs such as veterans' allowances and family allowances. As a result, Andras said, an extra $926 million is needed for these social benefits in the coming year.

Federal spending on public works in Western Canada is being trimmed to $160.66 million compared with the $162.1 million allocated for the last fiscal year.

HIGHLIGHTS

● Total spending to rise by 9.8 per cent to $48.8 billion in 1978-79 from the current-year target of $44.45 billion.

● Interest charges on federal debt to increase by $1.15 billion to $6.5 billion — 14 cents out of every dollar spent.

● Social welfare costs to increase about $1 billion to $9.2 billion amid official indications that cost-cutting change may be on the way.

● Budget for direct make-work projects to be reduced, but indirect employment aid for private business to grow.

● Employment in government departments and agencies to rise by 1,848 man-years to 325,120 man-years.

● Total expenditures on federal bilingualism programs to expand by almost 56 per cent to $503 million.

● Outlays on the arts and entertainment to increase by more than 12 per cent to about $767 million, including $522 million for the CBC.

● Expense of augmenting unemployment insurance fund for the present financial year to increase to $1.7 billion from $1.3 billion last year.

Import Costs Zoom 25%

VANCOUVER (CP) — Merchandise entering Canada from the United States, Japan and most European countries is costing importers as much as 25 per cent more than a year ago at the wholesale level, mainly due to the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar.

That means consumers will be, and in some case already are, paying higher prices for imported commodities.

The fall of the Canadian dollar, combined with the stnregthening value of the Japanese yen, has resulted in a major price increase at the wholesale level on Japanese cameras, said store owner Steve Good.

"Last fall we were buying a Minolta SRT-200 for $176 and retailing it for $199," he said. "As of Feb. 1 our cost for the same camera is $235. We're paying more for that camera than we were selling it for and the magic $200 plateau for a single-lens reflex no longer exists."

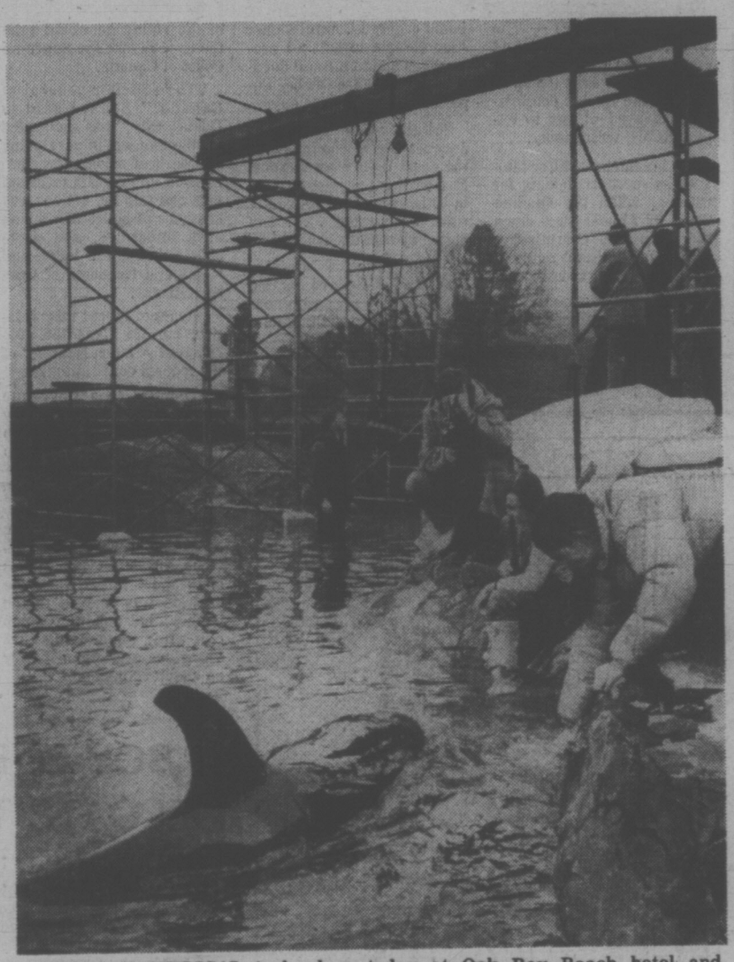

The Japanese-built Honda Accord, the most sought-after import automobile in North America, went up $400 three weeks ago and now sells for $5,800, say local car dealers.

Lakehill Trading owner Frank Warburton paid $33 wholesale six months ago for a heavy-knit British woolen sweater. It now costs about $37 because of reversing values of the Canadian dollar and the British pound, he said.

"We have to lay aside 10 per cent more money to pay the increase in import prices," said Michael Farges, of Far-Met Importers, which handles gourmet foods and cheeses.

Farges said a pound of Swiss gruyere cheese cost him $2.10 to import a year ago. Today's import price is $2.80. That same amount of cheese sold for $3 a year ago and now retails for $3.98, he said.

Dave Spurrell, president of the 400-member Vancouver Wine Club, said a case of Schloss Vollrads white wine from the German Rheingau Estate cost him about $60 to import a year ago and now costs $84.

MIRACLE MEDICAL took place today at Oak Bay Beach hotel and examiners pronounced killer whale in good shape for helicopter trip to new pool at Sealand next week. Mammal has put on about 450 pounds since her arrival and now weighs a whopping 1,250 pounds. Whale has had 32 medicals since Aug. 12 and tender loving treatment for a variety of problems, including a gunshot wound. (John McKay photo)

Where's Police Woman?

Police Woman might be a hit TV show but the Victoria police department is having trouble finding women who want to play the role in real life.

Deputy Chief Les Mottershead told the Victoria Police Board today a recent advertising campaign in local newspapers had brought 24 job applications — but only one from a woman.

With only one woman constable now on the force, the department is eager to recruit females.

But because of human rights legislation it is restricted in its advertising approach to the problem.

Mottershead said that due to fears that the department might be accused of sexism in its advertising, the ads have shown pictures of both policemen and policewomen and the positions are listed for "police personnel".

Mayor Mike Young said he'll write to the provincial government complaining that because of current human rights legislation "we're unable to run the ad we want to."

British Still Digging

TAUNTON, England (AP) — Blizzards that left snow drifts up to 30 feet deep in parts of southwest England have claimed at least seven lives, police reported Tuesday.

Police said more persons may have died trying to dig out of snowed-in homes or escape from trapped cars in the rural area's worst winter weather decades.

Rescue operations and helicopter searches have been hampered by blocked roads and fog, police said.

Rain and the start of a thaw due to slightly rising temperatures has brought the additional hazard of flooding. Kingsbridge in the south of Devon County suffered floods Tuesday and a county water authority spokesman said: "We are already preparing for serious flooding if the thaw is fast."

Most roads in Devonshire and the counties of Somerset, Dorset and northeast Cornwall remained blocked by snow, which first started falling late last week.

Denis Howell, the government minister responsible for co-ordinating emergency operations, announced in this Somerset County town that army units were being moved in to help with road clearing.

Southwest Wales and southern Scotland also have been badly hit by heavy snow and many roads in the two areas remain blocked.

UIC Being Cheated By Municipalities?

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Municipalities are the latest unemployment insurance cheats to be identified.

J.L. Manion, chairman of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, which administers the unemployment insurance program, admitted to the Commons public accounts committee Tuesday that the commission was suspicious of a pattern that appears to exist among some municipalities in different provinces.

He wouldn't name any offenders but said they hire individuals, who otherwise would be going on welfare, to do menial public works chores for the minimum qualifying period for unemployment benefits.

In this way he said, the municipalities avoid paying out welfare money later on. the cost of supporting the people involved is carried by the unemployment insurance program.

Manion refused to call the practice "a sham transaction," when urged to do so by Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West), who said he has known about the practice since 1971, when the eligibility period was reduced to eight weeks. It is now 10 to 14 weeks.

Manion told reporters at the conclusion of the hearing that a "rip-off against any public program is a rip-off against all of us."

Unemployment insurance is a contributory scheme in which the federal government, employers and employees participate.

Welfare payments, generally, are split three ways among municipalities, the provinces and the federal government, under provisions of the Canada Assistance Plan.

The practice could occur wherever there is an enterprising welfare administrator interested in or under orders to reduce welfare costs, Manion said.

He said most of the "evidence the commission has is "anecdotal" because it is hard to pin down actual cases.

The ministry likes to assure all the circumstances and hardships faced by a client are considered before charges are laid.

"But on the other hand we are not putting up with any nonsense from those who willfully cheat the system."

Welfare Probes Net $2M

Human resources inspectors investigated 3,650 alleged welfare frauds last year and laid 354 charges resulting in an annual savings of $2 million, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today.

Recoveries ordered or agreed to amounted to $379,000.

In addition, another $164,000 in monthly welfare payments were terminated.

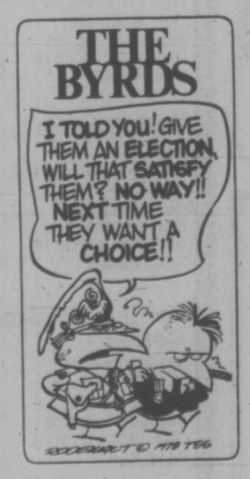

Vander Zalm said that of the 3,650 cases, 1,433 are still under investigation.

The fraud cases have involved up to $30,000 from a single recipient with the majority being in the $1,000 range.

He said there has been evidence in some cases of organized fraud, but the most prevalent problem has been common-law relationships where one spouse is earning an income.

Vander Zalm said in most cases the ministry simply arranges for repayment of funds or terminates continuing benefits rather than taking people to court.

"For the most part, we only proceed with charges for flagrant violations of the system," he said.

MPs 'Illegally Bugged'

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP security service have subjected a federal Liberal cabinet minister and a member of the New Democratic Party to unauthorized electronic eavesdropping according to a sworn statement submitted to the government, Elmer MacKay (PC-Central Nova) said today.

He named Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand and John Rodriquez (NDP—Nickle Belt).

In the Commons Prime Minister Trudeau and Solicitor-General Jean Jacques Blais said they are taking the matter seriously and plan to follow it up.

MacKay questioned Trudeau and Blais about "sworn information that a minister of the crown and a member of the New Democratic Party were in fact subjected to that kind of electronic surveillance" that Trudeau said last year had never taken place since he became prime minister.

Trudeau said he stood by his statement, on the basis of security service information, that no federal MP, without consent, has been the object of electronic surveillance by the security service.

Blais said he had received the document MacKay referred to. "There are allegations in that document I would like to follow up," he said.

In a written statement outside the Commons MacKay said the affidavit was sworn by Warren Hart, a United States citizen currently employed with naval intelligence in the U.S.

Blais said he would consider MacKay's suggestion that Hart appear before the federal royal commission into RCMP activities.

Carson Wins, Says NDP Toughest

Oak Bay Social Credit candidate Frank Carson says the NDP will be his toughest opponent in the March 20 byelection in Oak Bay.

Carson, who defeated Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith for the nomination Tuesday night, said the Conservatives aren't his biggest concern because that party's vote in Oak Bay has been a Scott Wallace vote.

Former Tory leader Wallace resigned his seat Dec. 31, creating the byelection in the constituency.

"The Scott Wallace vote is not transferable," Carson said. "The NDP is the opposition in this province, therefore they have to be the threat."

Carson is a former Victoria aldermen and is a car dealer.

Smith was visibly crestfallen.

"If I'd had another week to call on another 100 people . . ." he said.

Of the 2,700 registered Socreds in Oak Bay, 1,521 attended the convention in the Racquet Club.

"I guess he (Carson) did a better job getting his people out to the meeting," Smith said.

The exact vote is not known because of a Socred nominating policy not to reveal the count to give the impression of unanimity in candidate selection.

But several insiders said the difference was between 100 and 200 votes.

The Socreds were the last party to name their candidate for the byelection.

The Liberals have chosen Graham Ross-Smith, the Tories have brought in their new leader Vic Stephens, the NDP nominated Bennett Camp and Larry Tickner is running for the Socialist Party of Canada.

The crowd jammed almost every available room in the Racquet Club.

When the main floor was filled, the lounges and cafeteria were used with delegates viewing the proceedings on the convention floor via closed-circuit telvision.

Carson told the delegates a socialist threat still exists and the the NDP is continuing to make encroachments at the municipal level in the riding.

He said paid NDP researcher John Mika, who is a Saanich alderman, managed to get elected in mid-term to the Capital Regional District board without running one ad in the newspapers.

Carson, who was nominated by former Oak Bay Social Credit candidate Howie McDiarmid, asked the delegates to vote for him and let him finish the job he started in 1975 when he opposed Wallace and came second.

Smith also mentioned the NDP as the main opposition and said a recent poll on Vancouver Island shows 37 per cent support for the NDP compared to 25 per cent for the Socreds.

Coal Strike Cutting Jobs

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Officials of Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia announced Tuesday the first in what is feared may become a series of widespread power cutbacks, while layoffs forced by the U.S. coal strike mounted to almost 3,000 in Indiana.

The affects of the cutback in the three states was not immediately determined.

One explanation was that power sharing and conservation are helping stretch dwindling coal stocks.

Another was that officials from several states near the Appalachian coalfields are trying to co-ordinate cutbacks, which they said remained imminent.

The attempts at co-ordination involved parts of Ohio, Kentucky and Pennsylvania, as well as Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. It was not clear what affect the three-state cutback will have on the others.

But in Indiana, 2,900 layoffs were reported this week in Terre Haute, Kokomo, Peru and Anderson, in addition to 930 layoffs for two days last week in Anderson. The numbers are expected to increase, with coal stocks at two big Indiana utilities below the 40-day point at which they must order industry to cut back usage 25 per cent.

In Ohio, Akron-based Ohio Edison Co., serving 800,000 customers in central and northern Ohio, said it was three days above the 30-day coal-stock level at which it will impose 50 per cent cutbacks on industry.

In West Virginia, the state Public Service Commission had been scheduled to impose 30 per cent curtailments Monday — from which some 25,000 layoffs were expected. But Gov. Jay Rockefeller had objected and the PSC suspended its order.

In Pennsylvania, where no layoffs were reported, Gov. Milton Shapp asked President Carter to declare an energy emergency that would allow suspension of pollution regulations.

Meanwhile, the U.S. coal industry today called for voluntary binding arbitration in the strike as negotiators for the two sides held last-chance talks in hopes of avoiding a government-imposed end to the dispute.

The industry said binding arbitration is "preferable to the loss which the economy is now suffering."

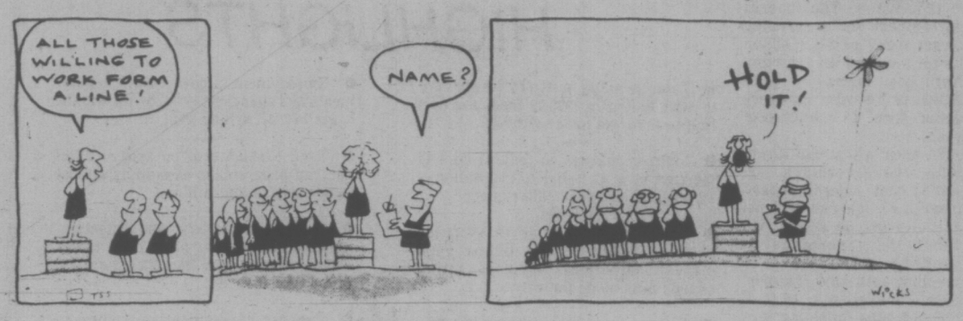

Seven-Ounce Baby

JAKARTA (AFP) — A "miniature" premature baby, weighing only 200 grams (seven ounces) at birth three weeks ago is today reported to be doing well after doctors predicted that she would only live a few days.

The baby girl, born to a woman seven months pregnant in Ngimingan Village, central Java, now weighs 600 grams (one pound 5 oz.) and appears to be healthy in all respects, the Nationalist Merdeka Daily newspaper reported.

Keable Probe Suspended

MONTREAL (CP) — The Trudeau government emerged the victor Tuesday in its battle to shift the spotlight off the Keable commission's dogged efforts to expose RCMP wrongdoing.

The break came, after four successive court defeats for Ottawa, when the Quebec Court of Appeal shut down the provincial commission with an order that is unlikely to be lifted for many months—if at all.

The three-man appeals tribunal ordered Commissioner Jean Keable to halt all proceedings and to turn all documentation over to Quebec Superior Court within 15 days.

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, who inherited the court fight from Francis Fox earlier this month, said in Ottawa, "That's exactly what we wanted . . . I'm elated by that decision."

Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard, acting on Keable's recommendation, announced within hours of the ruling he would take the case before the Supreme Court of Canada.

"The solicitor-general of Canada," Bedard said in Quebec City, "has succeeded for the moment in paralysing the work of an inquiry commission into certain criminal acts and into the actions and behavior of policemen which have imperilled, and probably still do, the individual rights and freedoms of Quebec citizens.

"I cannot accept this situation, nor the Canadian government's interpretation of the federal constitution."

Premier Rene Levesque described the ruling as "very unfortunate" and a blow to the commission's effort to protect individual liberties.

Keable, a 31-year-old labor lawyer from Quebec City whose name has become a household word in the province, showed no visible signs of disappointment when the decision was relayed to the inquiry, but made a quick exit after announcing that "hearings are adjourned for an undetermined period."

Federal lawyers meanwhile shook hands and hugged each other.

A commission source said it is likely to take at least two months before the appeal is heard, but observers estimated the commission would be shut down until the fall—probably until after the impending federal election.

If the Supreme Court treats it as "an emergency case," the appeal could be processed by the end of the year, an RCMP lawyer said.

In his 38-page majority opinion, Mr. Justice Rodolph Pare wrote: "In short, the dispute with which this commission is seized opposes the provincial executive power to the federal executive power and I do not see why the latter should be subjected to the former."

The ruling took Blais off the hook for failing to obey an order to appear personally before the commission last week.

It also came just in time to prevent the appearance of another former solicitor-general, Jean-Pierre Goyer.

BOY OVERBOARD FLOATS TWO DAYS

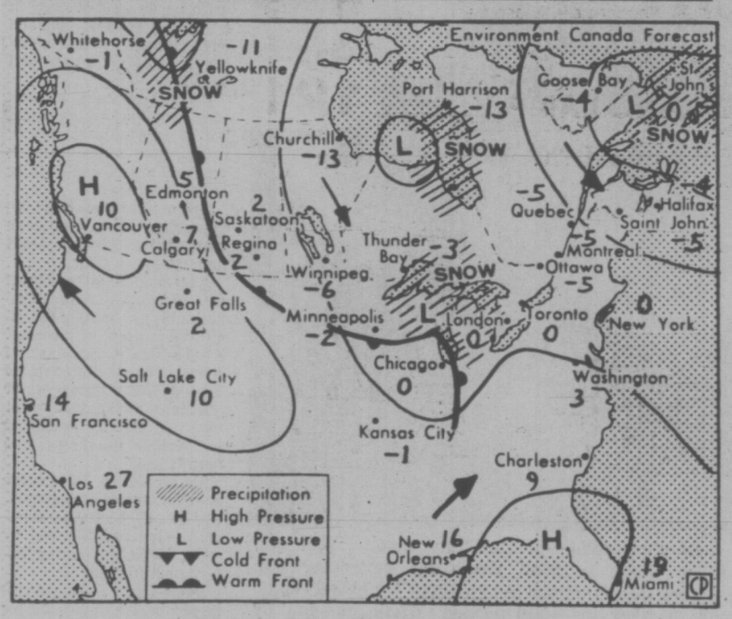

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — A 14-year-old Indian boy who fell overboard on a voyage home from China stayed afloat for two days in the Indian Ocean, a government announcement said today.

The Norwegian ship Toleda picked him up on Feb. 4 about 370 kilometres (200 nautical miles) south of Sri Lanka and landed him at Port Said in Egypt.

The boy, identified only as D'Netto of Bombay, remained afloat with a life preserver after he fell overboard Feb. 2.

He was travelling with his parents on the Indian ship Damodar, which was returning to Goa, south of Bombay.

the weather

Map valid until noon Thursday

The cloudy mild weather of the past few days seems to be coming to an end. The last in the present series of Pacific systems has reached the coast and will clear British Columbia tonight or early Thursday. The conditions of fog, rain and drizzle will give way to clearing skies as a ridge of high pressure builds over British Columbia from the west. Temperatures will be a little lower but still near or just above the long term averages for late February.

Gillespie Offers Switch On Pipe

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government can approve a 54-inch instead of a 56-inch pipe size for use in the Northern natural gas pipeline if necessary to head off any United States attempt to reopen the whole deal for negotiation, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday.

Gillespie told the Commons selection of 56-inch-diameter pipe by the National Energy Board, a federal regulatory agency, is regarded by both Canadian and U.S. governments as requiring only a technical change to the agreement on pipeline construction between the two countries.

However, in the face of questions from Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) who said the U.S. was disappointed with the NEB's decision and may want to use the technicality to seek new negotiations, Gillespie said if the U.S. "wants to re-open negotiations we would have the fallback position of proceeding with the 54-inch pipe."

He later told reporters if a controversy develops in the U.S. Congress that threatens to delay construction of the pipeline, scheduled to start in 1981, "we can decide to revert to 54-inch."

Meanwhile, the U.S. government had not issued a formal reaction to Monday's NEB decision although various spokesmen expressed disappointment. And a new U.S. government report said the 56-inch, low—pressure pipe would cost U.S. consumers an extra $1 billion over 30 years to transport gas from Alaska.

Gillespie denied the $1 billion loss figure quoting the NEB as saying the 56-inch pipe will result in savings, not losses, for both Canadian and U.S. gas consumers in the long-run because it is more efficient than the 54-inch pipe.

"I think the issue was very carefully examined by the NEB," Gillespie told reporters. Both sizes of pipe can be manufactured by plants in Hamilton, Ont. and Regina.

There was no way the government would revert to a 48-inch, high-pressure pipe advocated initially by the U.S. but rejected by Canada as new technology requiring extensive testing that could take up to two years.

Charges Eyed In Dog Deaths

An investigation is being conducted into the deaths of 113 dogs, which suffocated or battered themselves to death inside a crate during a two-hour flight from Thule, Greenland, to Alert, Northwest Territories, last week, a police spokesman in Yellowknife said Tuesday.

RCMP Cpl. Vern Kawaleski said in a telephone interview that the investigation is expected to take several more days and charges of cruelty to animals might be laid.

A total of 180 huskies, belonging to a team of Japanese explorers headed for the North Pole, were being transported inside a three-tier crate aboard a Pacific Western Airlines Hercules freighter.

The crate, built specially by the Japanese, was six metres by three metres by three metres.

Airline spokesman Brian Johnson said Tuesday that the Japanese asked the airline to move the dogs and supplied the container. Two Inuit dog handlers made the trip.

"We have a great deal of experience in transporting animals by air and the area where the dogs were stored was pressurized and well-ventilated," Johnson said.

"The dogs were tranquillized and we turned the heat down because we didn't want the dogs to catch pneumonia," he said. "During the flight the crew realized there were problems but there was very little they could do at the time.

"A full investigation is being made into how the dogs died."

Johnson said the Japanese group had been studying the dogs in Greenland for four years and PWA assumed their Japanese customers were experts in the care and transport of the animals.

Johnson said he could not comment on whether the shed had been properly ventilated when it was constructed.

The surviving dogs were taken off the aircraft at Alert, on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island. Most of the carcasses were flown to Resolute Bay, N.W.T., where all were disposed except for two, which were kept for medical tests.

Newsman Makes Splash

PORT MOODY (CP) — A sea plane flipped over in Burrard Inlet Tuesday, but the pilot wasn't the only one to get wet.

A British Columbia Television Co. cameraman, there to record the incident, ended up the in the water, along with his $50,000 camera, and he says he was pushed by pilot John Way.

"I was just trying to shoot film of two passengers, and the pilot in a grey mechanic suit, "said cameraman Gary Hanney," when the guy in front, the pilot, suddenly bent down, took a lunge at me and shoved me right into the drink.

"All I could think about was saving the damned camera because salt water corrodes the circuits all to hell.

"I was just doing my job, " added Hanney. "If he didn't want to be filmed, he could have told me."

Pilot Way of Surrey agrees he jostled Hanney but said it was all an accident.

"There were seven or eight people milling about on the dock and as I was going toward Hanney, I tripped on my wet shoelace and fell toward him," said Way.

Soviets Don't Want to Pay

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Soviet space expert said Tuesday he does not feel the Soviet Union is obligated to pay the cost of Canada's search for a Soviet spy satellite that fell from earth orbit last month because Soviet help in the search was turned down.

"My personal opinion is that it is no question of compensation of expenses for search because they refused our proposal to do this," said Evgeni Fedorov.

The Canadian government, aided by the United States, launched a big air and ground search for satellite debris.

Fedorov, in New York City to attend a meeting of the United Nations outer space committee's scientific subcommittee, told a news conference Canada turned down his country's offer to help in the search for debris, choosing to accept help from the U.S. instead.

Suit Launched In Hotel Blaze

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Japanese dentist is claiming damages in British Columbia Supreme Court for injuries he said were suffered when an elevator door opened on a burning floor of the city's Sheraton-Landmark Hotel on July 16, 1976.

Yutaka Hayakawa, of Yokohama, is suing Wosk's Ltd., owner of the hotel, and Otis Elevator Company Limited for general damages and punitive and exemplary damages in connection with the incident.

In a statement of claim, Hayakawa said that the elevator stopped at the fifth floor because the stopping mechanism was activated by heat and smoke and when the door opened, the occupants were exposed to smoke and intense heat.

The statement of claim says that in the resulting panic, Hayakawa was pushed out of the elevator. He said he collapsed, the elevator doors then closed and the car descended, leaving him on the fifth floor until he was rescued by a fireman.

Hayakawa said he suffered smoke irritation of the lungs, pneumonia, bronchitis, burns to both hands, and impaired vision as a result of scorching of the eyes.

He said that as the result he is impaired in his practice as a dentist.

The claim alleges the hotel was negligent because it either had no fire alarm system or an inadequate one, and it permitted guests to use an elevator system which exposed them to a serious risk in the event of fire.

Russian Horns

"Not all Russians have horns." That was the slogan of an organization which encouraged Americans to travel to the Soviet Union and to meet ordinary Russians. Its aim was to break down the high walls of propaganda erected during the cold war which painted Soviets as ruthless, fanged monsters who devoured the small children of the bourgeoisie.

It is a maxim of which Tory MP Tom Cossitt appears to be totally ignorant. His irresponsible attack against legitimate Canadian business firms owned by the USSR — made under cover of the protection afforded by parliamentary privilege and not repeated outside the House of Commons — was made without any supporting proof or even the slightest circumstantial evidence.

His rationale appears to be: these firms are owned by the Soviet Union, the Russians engage in espionage, therefore these companies are guilty of subversion in Canada.

He is piggy-backing on the present mild anti-Soviet climate in Canada caused by the Cosmos 954 satellite crash and the expulsion of a dozen real Russian spies but, as the first sentence of this editorial states, distinctions must be made, lines drawn.

Canadians probably hold few illusions about the Russians. They know the Soviet Union engages in espionage, as do most other nations. But to propose that Russia bends every industrial enterprise, every ruble that goes overseas in trade, every commercial venture, towards in the service of the KGB is complete rot.

Russians need to live, to eat, to prosper in the same way Americans and Canadians. They make tractors and electric generating turbines and run merchant shipping fleets that compete with the tractors and turbines and freighters of western nations. The Soviet Union buys a great deal of wheat from Canada and the U.S.; if it can balance the trade with exports of Soviet-made industrial goods, it helps them and helps us too.

What is disturbing for Canadians about Cossitt's unsubstantiated remarks is not so much their substance (exceedingly thin) but the fact that they clearly emanate from somewhere in the security service of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The MP made no secret that his source was a high RCMP officer.

Unfortunately, these days any manoeuvre of the force's security service has to be examined closely for other motives. Leaking to Cossitt the RCMP's suspicions, surmises, assorted allegations and imaginings concerning Russian-owned companies in Canada appears to be an attempt to whip up a backlash against everything associated with the Russians in Canada.

Canadians should be on guard against such clumsy smears. Until Cossitt can produce more substantial evidence than "a highly-placed Mountie told me so" Canada should continue to deal with Russian firms.

"... we are merely in a process of adjustment ..."

Unreasonable Hostility

The hostility in two of the province's universities against Education Minister Pat McGeer's open university television learning program is remarkable to behold.

The minister may not have gone out of his way to propitiate the higher learning establishment in British Columbia concerning this revolutionary development in post-secondary education, and his cocksure boast that it "will be the greatest advance in education in B.C. in the century" fairly invited the deflators to go to work.

But the wave of antagonism that greeted the minister's announcement last week — the University of Victoria excepted, perhaps because it has probably been the most active of the three public universities in offering new programs and off-campus courses — is premature and unreasonable.

Simon Fraser University president Pauline Jewett said McGeer "hasn't any idea of what is entailed in such a project." Richard Roydhouse, president of the University of B.C. faculty association, said McGeer's announcement made him "roll on the floor in laughter."

The general public probably will be more receptive to the open university idea, especially those British Columbians who live far from the populous southwest corner of the province which has only about half the population but all the major universities.

If these institutions had made a greater effort or been more flexible and innovative in bringing rural town and gown together, there might not be this perceived threat on their doorsteps today.

For example, although it is possible to earn a degree taking courses part-time at SFU, UBC and UVic, it is a difficult obstacle course. Part-time students, those who have to work to support themselves and a family as well, perhaps, are highly motivated to learn and do well in their courses. Not to disparage the young high school graduates who still form the majority of university student population, but it is unlikely that 40 per cent of mature students would fail their courses, as did the UBC freshman class taking English 100.

Maybe the British open university cannot be transplanted to the bush, but if through radio and television the illuminating benefits of higher education can be brought to the remote reaches of B.C., it should at least be allowed to try.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Facing A Year of Decision

It is mere cliche, of course, to say that Canada has entered the grand climacteric of its life and that the government elected this year will be the most important (though not necessarily the best) in its history. Nonetheless the cliche needs saying, and understanding, if we are to prepare ourselves for the hard test ahead.

Tom Paine's famous dictum, as chief propagandist of the American revolution, serves well enough to describe the peaceful contemporary revolution in a Canadian state then unforeseeable: "These are the times that try men's souls." They are also the times that begin, only just begin, to try men's intelligence, to expose the living inner stuff of our country long overlaid by a rind of hubris and illusion — worst of all the illusion of the quick fix.

Instant Protest

Thus examined, Canada seems to be in better shape than we usually suppose in our current humor of pessimism. It is recovering its native common sense and spirit level, though it has quite a way to go yet.

Against such a hopeful view there will be instant protest when our affairs look chaotic, our government is bewildered and stumbling, the opposition promises easy, unworkable solutions and Premier Levesque kindly recommends painless national suicide.

But despite all our troubles the plain and generally forgotten fact is that the majority of Canadians live better now than at any time in the past, their prospects are as bright as any in the world and the evidence of their returning sobriety, after the ten-year binge, is to be seen if we pry through the surface.

Instead, we prefer to worry about imagined fatal symptoms in a kind of collective hypochondria and, as Winston Churchill observed, a nation taking its pulse too often is likely to destroy its health.

The recent federal-provincial conference, whether it succeeded or failed in its specific purposes — a question not immediately answered — was a healthy sign. To be sure, our 11 governments disagreed about various issues and the government of Quebec regarded the exercise as a temporary diversion, pending the day of freedom. But leaving aside the arguments of detail, the men themselves and their personal ambitions, what did we really see at the summit?

We saw that most Canadians are no longer much interested in politics as a game of winners and losers, ins and outs, debating points and sleek platitudes. They are interested in something of greater significance, the nation's survival and the future of their children.

The assembled ministers reflected this changed public mood and, for the first time, confessed their accumulated mistakes, recognized that many of their earlier assumptions were firmly set in jello and uttered a joint mea culpa never heard before now. Even more remarkable, they agreed that there can be no quick fix in a crunch that took years to develop and will take years to overcome.

This unprecedented confessional and warning is a good start on the road back from the detour and aberration of the last decade in which the people, and the journalists who inform then, were as mistaken as the politicians.

Still more encouraging, the governments, even the New Democratic government of Saskatchewan and the left-wing, separatist government of Quebec, agreed that the magic of money, deficit budgets and drastic tax cuts will not solve our problems, that spending (apart from constructive capital investment) has run wild and must be curbed.

Finally the governments agreed that palliatives and placebos, however necessary they may be in the short run, are no permanent cure, that both the economy and the constitution must be structurally revised, that the process of revision will be difficult, clumsy and slow, no matter what happens in Quebec.

No Placebos

Soon all these useful ventures will be interrupted, and doubtless confused, by an election which can change the federal government without changing the problems. No election since 1867 has posed the choices and risks now before us. The government elected in the spring or autumn will have to deal with a threat unlike any facing its predecessors. Levesque has made sure of that in advance.

More than ever, in our constitutional and economic dilemma, we need the strongest government we can find and no government or party of the required strength is yet in sight. Already the practical politicians, speaking off the record, perceive the nightmare of another Parliament of minorities, inevitably weak, when it is the last thing we can afford.

But the public, frequently wiser than the politicians, will avoid the old familiar trap if it realizes that this is indeed a year of decision with results certain to outlast all today's headlines and personalities.

CLAUDE ADAMS

Cheating Five Years Later

WASHINGTON — Nothing galvanizes the Washington press like Watergate, even five years after the fact. But anyone reading the major east coast papers this past weekend must be left with the feeling that the country's major opinion-shapers have gone from the sublime to the ridiculous in covering that never-ending story.

Try and follow this, if you can:

Last Wednesday, the country's second most important newspaper steals a hot Watergate story from the most important newspaper, and scoops the world.

Foul, cries No. 1, which has already sold exclusive rights to its Haldeman property to four dozen other newspapers for close to a million dollars. A case of blatant piracy.

Not so, says No. 2, the Haldeman memoirs were fair game for journalistic enterprise, just as the Pentagon Papers had been for No. 1 some years ago.

Repeat Performance

So everyone who's watching reckons that once again, The Washington Post (No. 2) has embarrassed The New York Times (No. 1) by beating it to a major story. Just like Watergate.

There is much crowing and hooting in Washington press clubs. An anecdote has been born, something that newsmen would be talking about for months.

But wait, on Sunday, as things are mercifully beginning to quiet down, the editorial writers at No. 2 are having second thoughts. Just what did we steal, they are asking themselves.

The lead editorial in the Sunday Post is titled Money Talks. It describes the Haldeman memoirs as a "sordid chronicle" arousing the kind of "morbid" fascination that draws crowds to bloody auto accidents.

Haldeman, says the paper which first published his Watergate recollections, is a liar. His book is suspect, says the Post.

"His account of events cries out for some literary equivalent of a surgeon-general's warning.

"It is not a volume to be left within the reach of small children or the impressionable. Its use by even the most careful historians could be dangerous. For Mr. Haldeman is not believable."

Incredibly, the newspaper is attacking the very material it bannered over its front pages just four days earlier. But there is more. Haldeman, it says, was obviously motivated by the buck and for money "you can say almost any wild and unsubstantiated thing you want."

The reader, thoroughly bewildered, turns to The New York Times, which through its syndication service had the story from the start and proceeded to lose it. On its editorial pages, the Times takes a somewhat more philosophical view.

After describing the Post scoop earlier in the week as a "second-rate burglary," the Times applies an old Watergate nostrum to the entire affair: "There can be no effective conspiracy as long as Americans are chaotically competing, fairly or otherwise, for information, influence, power and profit."

H. R. HALDEMAN
... smiling through it all

Then the Times too says in so many artful words that H. R. Haldeman is, indeed, a liar.

So here we have the country's two most influential newspapers, reprimanding Haldeman for having foisted a confidence game on the American public in which they had so enthusiastically participated.

There is more ... on Monday, the Post carried a big advertisment from a local department store. "We've got it — Haldeman's new book," the ad screams. "Save 20 per cent."

What's this? The book itself wasn't supposed to come out until Feb. 27, a full week later.

"Not so," says the lady in the store's book department. "The book is out already. The Post story pushed up the release date."

"You see, in this business, when one person cheats, we can all cheat."

Of course, you say, striking your forehead smartly. That's it. Cheating everybody is cheating.

The Washington Post was cheating, with its seismic scoop. The New York Times was cheating, by originally promising a blockbuster story and then, when it unfolded, calling it a lie. And all the newspapers who paid up to $25,000 for serialization rights were cheating their readers, by dressing up this turkey and publishing it.

Following the parade in double time, the bookstores are now cheating by racing to put it on their shelves and promoting it as "new sensational disclosures."

Ironies

And the man who started it all, by writing about a president who cheated, is himself cheating everyone's sense of morality by cashing in on his sins as an accomplice to high crimes.

Cash registers everywhere are ringing.

The biggest laugh in this whole story comes near the end of Haldeman's book, after he has fashioned conversations he "might" have had with Nixon and offered countless theories about what "might" have happened to trigger Nixon's resignation. Here Haldeman is talking about ironies:

"The ultimate irony is that the Watergate break-in stands as the only major political scandal in history in which not one of those who brought it about was personally benefitted in any way — and no one other than those who brought it about was personally hurt by it in any way."

Wrong. The ultimate irony of Watergate was played out last week, when the nation's newspapers underwrote with cash and column inches a packet of half-truths and self-serving theories and then, without the barest glance over their shoulders, fulminated against the man who produced it.

The punch line will come next May, when Richard Nixon releases his memoirs to an expectant world. One senses that it will all happen again.

Theatre Blindness

I extend kudos to the Times for its concerned and unequivocal stand taken in its editorial An Artistic Controversy, (Times, Feb. 14).

I strongly suspect that that portion of the audience that storms out of Comedians probably thinks that making love in the afternoon is a perverted activity; or, at least, that masturbation (if I may be permitted the use of that word) causes, or should cause, blindness. Now since the play (and will we ever convince some it is actually a moral play?) doesn't clarify the blindness aspect, I am happy to announce that I have information to the effect that the acrobatic limerick lady's vision is fine.

Surely wish I could say the same for Victoria's myopic theatre-leavers. Makes one wonder how they manage to read their bingo cards. — Michael Cartan, 7-1479 Fort Street.

Numbers Game

If we are going to play the numbers game about the new hospital, would someone tell me how many people live in the downtown area, how many live in the northern and western sectors, how many doctors have their offices and homes downtown?

The No. 22 bus goes within a few yards of Helmcken Road, which incidentally is five miles from the centre of town, not way out in the boondocks as some people think. I have not seen any doctors lately doing their rounds by horseback, buggy or bicycle; on the other hand I have noticed some high-powered motor vehicles in their parking lots. How long does it take to go five miles at 30 m.p.h.? When the highway is completed a majority of that five miles will be at 50 m.p.h. — (sorry 80 k.m.h.). Also, McKenzie Avenue being put through will make a direct route for many people. How many people in the world today have a hospital within five miles of their home? Not many.

Let's have less talk and more action, or another 10 years from now we will still be waiting for a much-needed new hospital facility. — Peggy Nelson, 1218 West Burnside Road.

Rape and Police

I would like to respond to the article entitled Young Calls for Joint Film Review that appeared in the Times Feb. 10. I am concerned that, since my remarks about police training and treatment of rape victims were taken out of context, they will be misinterpreted by police and public in Victoria.

It is my understanding that police officers in training at the B.C. Police Academy spend a much larger proportion of their time than previously in social studies, and that the emotional reality of a person in distress, such as a woman who has been sexually assaulted, is also given correspondingly more attention than before.

I did not say that police "don't have enough expertise in the field of rape" to understand the implications of the Storaska film. First, such a remark would imply police incompetence and this is a false picture. Victoria Rape Relief has found that police in the Victoria area are generally sympathetic to the needs of the rape victim and efficient in carrying out their duties regarding a rape case.

Secondly, the Storaska film advises women to invite the rapist's sexual advances, I am sure that every police person knows that such advice runs counter to the police's job of bringing rapists to court and getting convictions where appropriate. A woman who appears to have consented to sexual intercourse, even if she was trying to protect herself, would not get a conviction.

Social attitudes about sexual assault, such as the idea that a woman can lie back and enjoy rape if it seems inevitable, or that a rapist is a man driven by uncontrollable sexual urges, are so dominant in our society that it is hard for all of us, including the police, to free our minds of such myths.

It is important for all agencies involved in dealing with sexual assault cases to work co-operatively and to share our knowledge and understanding wherever possible. I am glad that Victoria Rape Relief has such a relationship with the local police and hope that in future we can work more closely, especially in the educational aspect of rape prevention. — Rowena Hunnisett, Victoria Rape Relief.

Leadership

Bob McClelland, Minister of Health, has accepted his role of leadership and made the decision that Helmcken Road will become the site of a new hospital in the Victoria region.

He is to be commended for taking this stand as with all the bickering which has and is taking place he could be faulted for not making a decision.

The ineptitude and stalling of previous ministers of health had resulted in virtually no progress.

I do not recall any strong sponsorship for the upgrading and enlargement of the Victoria General. Several contentious viewpoints have been submitted to this minister and he has agreed to revisions and incorporate them in the Helmcken Road planning in concert with the total needs of the region such as desirability of pediatrics and obstetrics being kept together; the Victoria General will continue as a general hospital.

We now have the Victoria Medical Society strongly advocating by advertisements in the press that all the planning, discusions, etc., be discarded and we go back to square one and start afresh.

It is apparently admitted that more than a third of the membership of the medical society are in favor of the Helmcken Road site and that all the doctors in the region are not members of the society.

The people in the western portion of the region are entitled to a hospital.

The medical society hospital planning report states that the areas of Langford, Colwood and Sooke are at present looked after by a treatment centre set up by the Colwood doctors who are looking after 20 to 40 emergencies per day. This fact in itself would indicate the need for a hospital in that area of the region.

It boils down to the fact a decision had to be made and the minister accepted his responsibility and made it without any waffling or equivocation and called a halt to this repetitive state of division of opinion.

It is noted that labor is anxious for the Helmcken site project to start; this is the type of expansion we need at this time of unemployment. — K. R. Burns, 401 - 640 Dallas Road.

No Lunch At All

I find myself in agreement with our prime minister in connection with his "free lunch" remarks in Prince George recently. I must add that the man either has great vision or standard hindsight.

I am an unemployed male whose UIC claim has run out (just before rent day). It was nothing personal on their part, they were satisfied as to my job search, but I had received my full allotment. Consequently, I applied for, and was issued a welfare cheque (for four dollars more than my rent).

Now, once you get over the initial humiliation of applying, there are a host of other things to consider, such as food, utilities and the loss of any semblance of social life, pride and dignity.

At the moment I make ends meet by having a small breakfast and holding out till supper. So, Mr. Trudeau, you are correct, there is no free lunch. For some of us, there is no lunch.

I feel like a cog that fell out of the Great Alarm Clock of Life. But the worst part is: it kept on ticking . . . — Gordon V. S. Holmes, 304 - 2552 Vancouver Street.

Plan for Change

The committee choosing the Helmcken hospital site should at least have done a study showing theimpact the hospital will have on the immediate area and the Greater Victoria area.

Not only are the politicians burying their heads in the sand and ignoring the fact that the main hospital in that area will create 164,250 patient bed-days requiring services such as food, laundry, drugs, etc. But also there will be a potential of more than 164,250 visitors each year that will want their childen to go to museums, movies, parks, recreation centres, etc., while they are visiting their sick friends, sometimes the visitors' wives will want to go shopping while their spouse is visiting the hospital and visitors even require meals for long visits. Then there are nurses aides, custodial staff, filing clerks, etc. who will want to shop on their way to or from work as well as on their lunch hour. Added to this there will be a large number of doctors who will need to be at least five minutes from their office to the hospital and 10 minutes' drive from home to the hospital in order that emergency calls will not be a catastrophe by their late arrival. The impact of these doctors and offices and service personnel requires more service personnel such as the butcher, baker, mailman and newspaper boy. Then there will be schools for the children of the doctors, nurses and custodians and more and more pressure placed on the planners to rezone. Today I learned that a planning study has not been considered in choosing the Helmcken Hospital site and board members Tipton, Drummond and Beasley do not intend to have it done. They want the area to stay rural. If they want to keep this area rural then why would they place such a strong magnet in a rural setting? So that the chronicyill can look out the window at a tranquil setting and see no activity all day, all month, all year, and all the rest of their lives?

To deny planning action is ludicrous! How can regional planners make a decision if the politicians do not allow them to find and report the facts. It seems there is something very superficial about the decision making process for the hospital.

Why not let the planners make their report? Make the politicians study this planning report before any decisions are made. A hospital of the size they contemplate will need a substantial intensification of zoning and there is no way they are going to stop the development momentum that a hospital of this size will generate. — Ben Levinson, 2518 Orchard Avenue.

Listen to Him

What cowards we Canadians are! We masquerade our weaknesses under the pretence of loving Canada but we do nothing about it. In B.C. the labor unions try their best to destroy our economy. Every man for himself, especially if you belong to a union. Due to our present federal government, we are being led down the garden path. Unfortunately two cars and two color televisions are more important than saving Canada from becoming a divided country and an economic failure.

Only three important men in our present official government have had the guts to relinquish the goodies given out by Trudeau. The three that I can quote are Paul Hellyer, John Turner and James Richardson.

Richardson at the moment is only a voice in the wilderness. He loves Canada, he fought for it, even if our own prime minister refused to do so. Why don't we listen?

I have always been proud that we had two strong nationalities in our country. We were privileged but we did not accept the blessing that the Lord gave us. Other ethnic cultures should also be encouraged because every race, creed and colour has something to strengthen us as a nation and make a country that we can be allowed to call our own and be proud of.

Quoting from the statement presented to the task force on Canadian unity by the Hon. J. A. Richardson, Jan. 13:

"It is important for all of us to understand the difference between individual bilingualism which is essential to Canadian unity and national bilingualism, which is the primary cause of national disunity. The only answer I see, is for all of us to accept the reality of Canada, which is that we have a national language, and not two or more equal languages. We must all try to remember that we are nation building, not province building and if Canadians are to achieve their destiny as one people, Canada must ultimately be united by language and not divided by language."

The alternative we have is not very good. Mr. Joe Clark's wife will not even use his name. In most of the statements he has made he would appear to share the PM's views on bilingualism. — A. L. Burns, 403-1120 Beach Drive.

Help Our Own

The article One Worries About the Poor from The New York Times did not surprise me in the least as I lived for some 30 years in countries where there was terrific wealth in the hands of the few and dire poverty of the masses. I did not find any concern on the part of the few wealthy for the poverty around them. This state of affairs was maintained by the armed forces and any revolt by the masses was immediately crushed. Chile is a typical example of this. Yet the "democracies" (including Canada) keep pouring money into Chile which will perpetuate this state of affairs. However, of course, the god of profit and low wages are determining factors.

I am very much opposed to sending funds to these countries to help the poor as surely it is the duty of the very wealthy of those countries to help their own. Here in Canada we would not ask for or expect such assistance. The case of aid for Vietnam is a horse of another colour as that unfortunate country was the victim of a ruthless aggression and was almost devastated. In view of this, I think it is wrong for the Socred government to withold the funds which were voted for that cause.

We will never have a perfect Canada, as after all we are only human but surely we should direct our efforts to aiding our own unfortunates. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

TWU vs CNIB

I do sincerely hope that members of the Telecommunications Workers Union are not tempting fate with their boycott of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind's cafeteria operation. Can any of them say, with absolute certainty, that blindness will never strike him or one of his loved ones? If anyone had told me five years ago that I would be blind in the near future, I would have told them that they were crazy, yet it happened!

I think that if they took the time to visit the CNIB headquarters on Blanshard Street and saw what a wonderful job their small staff are doing not only to help the people who are old hands but to help the men, women, and children who have just become blind to adjust to a world of darkness and semi-darkness, maybe then they would realize just how petty they are being. Don't forget a person on the picket line really doesn't look any different to a blind person than anyone else, just a black blob against a grey background. — Mrs. J. McDormand, 4070 Tracey Street.

Outrage 'Phoney' Over Mrs. Gandhi

SUNANDA DATTA-RAY
London Observer

CALCUTTA — Educated Indians are now busily absorbed in dissecting Mrs. Indira Gandhi's motives and methods. It is New Delhi's favorite pastime. But if the relentless post-mortem being carried out by several official inquiries suggests anything, it is not that Mrs. Gandhi perverted democracy. The sad lesson to emerge is that democracy — as the term is understood in the West — has never existed in India's stratified feudal atmosphere.

Political analysts explain the 19-month Emergency as an "aberration" created by a ruthless prime minister in her pursuit of personal power. Newspaper editors have told the courts how they were regularly ordered to play up a certain piece of information, prominently display favorable pictures and suppress news of which the authorities disapproved.

Orders from son

Senior civil servants describe how the legitimate chain of command was set aside and they daily visited the former prime minister's house to take orders from her 31-year-old son, Sanjay Gandhi.

We have heard of key posts — such as the chairmanship of the Reserve Bank, India's state bank — being filled on the basis of personal recommendation; of private decisions to enter into major contracts costing millions of pounds; of arbitrary promotions, transfers and dismissals; and of people being arrested and flung into jail at whim.

All this certainly makes doleful reading. Justice Jayantilal Chhoteylal Shah, a 71-year-old retired chief justice of the Supreme Court, has been charged with the task of ferreting out such details and establishing the extent to which customary administrative processes were overruled during the Emergency. Another commission is investigating Sanjay Gandhi's handling of the Maruti company, which was supposed to produce low-priced cars but apparently branched out instead into a variety of unrelated but profitable commercial ventures.

The implication of all this hectic activity is twofold. First, that conditions of life in Mrs. Gandhi's India were so abnormally peculiar as to justify an orgy of public confessions, dramatic denunciations, searching questions and finally, prosecution. Secondly, that India has now miraculously been restored to a democratic ideal where such cleansing can be carried out without provoking charges of witchhunting.

Neither premise is sustained by an impartial examination of Indian affairs since Jawaharlal Nehru became the country's first prime minister in 1947. When Mrs. Gandhi clamped down the Emergency on June 26, 1975, pleading a foreign-aided fascist conspiracy to create disorder at home, she may have been impelled by the desire to protect her own precarious position. But nothing that happened under the Emergency, repressive as it was, marked a significant departure from trends that were already evident.

Generate hate

The difference was not qualitative. It was only one of degree and emphasis.

This is an unfashionable view at a time when Mrs. Gandhi is held up by the Janata government as an object of ridicule and people are invited to seek absolution by spitting at the fallen leader. The clear intention is to use judicial inquiries to create an atmosphere of hate in which the former prime minister will be isolated from her supporters and can then be dealt a finishing blow without provoking retaliation.

The tactic may make sound political sense, but the readiness with which public opinion is prepared to criticize Mrs. Gandhi is in itself illustrative of the extent to which people here trim their sails to the dominant wind.

At a New Delhi seminar the other day, when the principal speaker delivered a long lecture on Mrs. Gandhi's dictatorial iniquities, a European in the audience got up to ask why, if the Congress prime minister was in fact such a tyrant, did she not rig the polls after the fashion of Franco, Salazar, Syngman Rhee and Thieu? He was promptly shouted down while the speaker dismissed the question with a few much applauded sneers.

The mood is frightening. But more important is the awareness — among those few who have not succumbed to officially-inspired populist hysteria — that Indian public life has always been dictatorial. If democracy is power-sharing, it is totally unknown here.

GANDHI

Nehru's tremendous personal stature enabled him to maintain the facade of regular elections, parliamentary debates and some semblance of the cabinet's collective responsibility. But behind this disarming camouflage he too made all his own decisions, permitting ministers only the right to agree with him. The appointments of senior civil servants depended entirely on his pleasure.

A circle of courtiers flourished around him, controlling access to him and dispensing favors.

Nehru has often been called the last of the British viceroys. It would be more appropriate to describe him as continuing the tradition of India's Mogul emperors. That tradition continues under Mararji Desai and his influential son, Kantibhai.

This aspect of Indian life is of particular relevance to the press and the police, which both played a controversial role during the Emergency. Editors now dolefully describe how they were pressured during the emergency; journalists talk of the incalculable risks they ran, while newspaper proprietors boast of the valiant defiance.

Mrs. Gandhi's regime was certainly harsh in its censorship laws; but the fact remains that the dispensation was uncomplainingly accepted by all papers.

There are far more heroes of the Emergency strutting about today than there ever were martyrs while the nightmare lasted. This is because Indian press-magnates have always looked to the govenment for guidance. Even in Nehru's time, owners would seek the prime minister's approval before appointing a new editor. They willingly anticipated the government's wishes as far as coverage was concerned and were only too happy to identify the ruling party with the national interest.

Gain favors

The explanation lies in the ownership of Indian newspapers. Proprietors are primarily industrialists with the press as only a minor sideline. They have always been prepared to use their papers as bargaining counters in obtaining commercial favors from New Delhi.

Mrs. Gandhi gave explicit sanction to this informal convention and ordained that newspaper magnates who did not support her would be deprived of the industrial privileges they sought. The ruling quickly brought owners to heel but also left behind a trail of festering grievances.

The sense of outrage that India displays today is synthetic. People are not shocked at revelations about Mrs. Gandhi's modus operandi for the disclosures contain nothing that is new. But they cannot forget that for the first time in Indian history, she made the upper class elite feel insecure. This is what the Shah commission and all the other probes are all about. It is the vengeance of an entrenched society visited upon a leader who was unlucky enough to have lost the electoral gamble.

HALDEMAN . . . does anyone care?

It's All So Boring

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Yet another Watergate book is upon us — and the instinctive response of any sane nervous system is to scream "Who cares?" We already know what the Richard Nixon White House was. We know the shallow cunning of the minds that inhabited it and the drip-dry sleaziness of the souls. What can it possibly matter, now that they are all rich, or on the way there, from the royalties on their memoirs, who says what about who did what, and with which, and for whom? What is most striking about this crew is not that they were evil, although they were; not that they were cruel, although they were; not that they were treacherous, although they were; not that they were dishonest, although they were. They are, to a man and above all, superlatively boring. They are the sort of people that nobody in his right mind would agree to have lunch with.

The iron chancellor of them all was H. R. (Bob) Haldeman — in the land of the bores a man with a 1½-barrel name like "H. R. (Bob)" will always be king. And his entry in the Watergate library proves his right to the title. Here, for example, is a glimpse of the H. R. (Bob) mind and heart in full, soaring flight: "I saw both greatness and meanness in Nixon in such bewildering combination that, years later, peering out of a hotel window at the White House which I had been forced to leave, I muttered out loud: 'Nixon was the wierdest man ever to live in the White House.' "

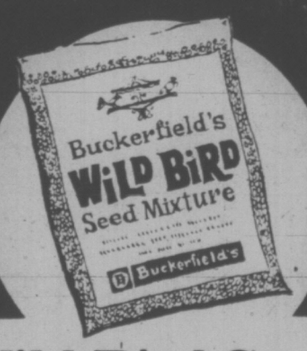

Recognizing the need for a sensational disclosure or two, Mr. Haldeman, who deals mainly in speculation and anecdotes, offers a couple of whoppers. John F. Kennedy was not the only president with a Cuban missile crisis; Richard Nixon had one too. Better yet, he hauled the world back from the brink of World War Three, which was to start with a Russian nuclear strike at China. And then there was the "Madman Theory," Nixon's own idea, Mr. Haldeman says. North Vietnam was to be cowed into submission with a warning that the president of the United States was out of his skull, far enough out to reach for the nuclear button.

That little tale would almost tempt us to the suspension of disbelief, if only it were not so hard to swallow the notion that the Nixon White House once came so close to a conspiracy to tell the approximate truth.

The leak is one of the oldest of political back room tricks. It is the surefire way of making a splash with a document that would be deservedly ignored it it came out in the orthodox way. And the Haldeman book, to the great indignation of The New York Times which had bought publication rights, was leaked to the Washington Post, and is getting much more attention than its contents deserve.

Tax Tips '78

Q. I earned $9,500 last year. What amount can I claim as my 'employment expense deduction'?

A. Your employment expense deduction is equal to 3 per cent of your wage and salary income up to a maximum of $250. In your case you can claim the full $250.

Q. How long can you contribute funds to a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. There is a twenty-year limit imposed on accumulating savings into a RHOSP, dating from the year the plan began. This applies to all plans, including those already in existence.

Q. What is a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. Registered Home Ownership Savings Plans (RHOSP) were introduced in 1974 to help first-time home buyers save money to purchase a home.

It allows you to deduct up to $1,000 a year in contributions to a life-time maximum of $10,000. Investment income of an RHOSP is accumulated tax-free and when you wish to withdraw all your funds to purchase a home, or home furnishings such as major appliances and furniture (in that case funds must be withdrawn in 1977) the funds are received tax-free to the extent that they are used for these purposes.

You will be able to claim a deduction for the purchase of your owner-occupied home up to three years after you withdraw your funds.

For more information about RHOSPs see Item 23 in your 1977 Tax Guide or ask your local Taxation Office for the pamphlet "Registered Home Ownership Savings Plans".

I borrowed money to invest. Can I deduct the interest on the borrowed income?

A. Yes. Remember, however, the income eligible for the Interest, Dividends and Capital Gains Deduction must be reduced by the interest you paid to earn that income.

Q. I own a house outside Canada. Am I eligible for a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. Beginning January 1, 1978 you may no longer apply for a RHOSP if you own real property in or outside Canada and anyone lived in that property at any time during the year.

Q. How do I handle the Western Grain Stabilization levy shown on my Wheat Board tickets?

A. The Western Grain Stabilization premium (W.G.S.) is an allowable expense. Care should be taken that you are not claiming it twice on your return, because the premium is already deducted from the proceeds of sale. In the event that you receive the equalization payment, the money that you received forms taxable income.

Q. I operate a restaurant and buy fish directly from the fisherman. Am I required to deduct and remit Unemployment Insurance premiums on his behalf?

A. A fisherman is not insurable for any sale of fish he sells directly to restaurants. therefore, no employee and employer premiums are required.

8¼%* interest compounded monthly is one very good reason for buying or transferring to a RHOSP at the Permanent. Another is, when you can only have one RHOSP in a lifetime, it makes sense to buy it from someone who knows just about everything there is to know about saving for and buying a home. And 123 years of experience doesn't hurt either. So, stop in at the Permanent branch nearest you. The deadline is March 1, 1978, for 1977 tax savings.

Petition for Wolves

A Victoria woman is circulating a petition against the use of poison to control the wolf population in B.C..

Carmen Karl, of 7022 Wallace Drive, who describes herself as a self-taught naturalist, said today she hopes to have at least 500 signatures by Saturday.

"In my opinion there are more humane ways of controling the population of wolves," she said.

"The poisons are bound to destroy other animals or birds."

The wolf poison program has been stepped up by the B.C. Fish and Wildlife branch as a preventive measure. The best time to control the predators is in winter.

The International Wildlife Protection Association and the World Federation for the Protection of Animals, have already asked Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf to ban the use of poisons on public lands.

Guitarist Featured

Classical guitar takes the spotlight in the Victoria Conservatory of Music Friday series of recitals this week.

The artist is Vancouver-born Dennis Olsen, who studied with Theo Bagchus on the mainland and with Jose Tomas in Spain. He is now a member of the guitar faculty at the Conservatory.

Olsen has been performing since the age of 10 and has given many recitals throughout B.C. He will perform works by Dowland, J.S. Bach, Torroba, Britten and Villa-Lobos.

Concert time is 8 p.m. and admission is $2, $1 for students and senior citizens.

Questioned Man Freed

No charges will be laid in connection with an alleged sexual assault in Saanich early Tuesday.

A police spokesman said today a 23-year-old man has been released after questioning.

The man was arrested after an 18-year-old girl told police she had been raped in a field in the Swan Lake area.

The spokesman said police have been unable to determine that a rape did in fact occur.

Donation Pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is the Senate's turn to consider a $5-million federal contribution to the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota. The House of Representatives approved the measure Tuesday by a vote of 356 to 53.

Anacortes Eyeing Swedish Ferry

Anacortes has begun negotiations to buy a 100-car Finnish ferry to take over the run to Sidney this summer.

Washington State Ferries will end its service to Sidney on June 1.

Purchase of the vessel Polar Express will depend upon a cash grant from the U.S. federal government covering 80 per cent of the purchase price.

The price of the ferry is $3.5 million but negotiations are continuing. It is being sold because it does not operate well in icy water. It holds 800 passengers, although room could be made for about 400 more by removing some staterooms.

Purchase of the ferry will be recomended to the Washington State Transport Commission at a meeting in Olympia Friday.

The Transport Commission, which operates the Washington ferry fleet, would lease the vessel from the Town of Anacortes if the purchase is approved.

Anacortes will also ask for an extension of the present ferry service to July 1, instead of June 1, to leave enough time to ready the Finnish vessel for use here.

The present vessel on the run is Evergreen State, a 100-car ferry which will be moved to a Puget Sound route this summer.

The Anacortes group also inspected M.V. Bonanza, a $4.5 million British cargo vessel, but it became second choice because additional funds would have to be found to convert it to a ferry.

NUCLEAR POWER IS SAFE, REPORT CLAIMS

By KEN POLE

OTTAWA — A confidential report that has been kept under wraps by th Atomic Energy Control Board for at least several months shows that nuclear power poses fewer risks to society than most other forms of energy.

The report, prepared by an independent study group, was expected to be released in Toronto today before the Porter Royal Commission on Electrical Energy.

It uses, for comparison's sake, the number of man-days lost in terms of energy generated by the different sources.

Natural gas, with six man-days lost for each megawatt-year (the amount of electricity consumed by 84 Canadians in one year), is counted as the best risk while nuclear power is considered second-best with approximately 10 man-days lost.

In a brief summary of the report, AECB spokesman Herbert Inhaber, who initially began investigating the various options and then turned his research over to the independent group because critics might think he was manipulating the figures, said the important finding is that some of the alternative energy sources are not as harmless as their advocates say.

Ocean thermal generation, which involves electricity produced by heat transfer between the surface of the sea and the lower layers, is thought to be the next safest energy source with about 31 man-days lost.

Three solar power alternatives have a potential for between 112 and 699 man-days lost, which, according to an Atomic Energy of Canada spokesman, "flies in the face of what's being said just about everywhere." Similar, wind-power generation has a potential loss of 821 man-days.

The proposed use of methanol, an alcohol obtained from processed trees, has a 1,270 man-days risk because of, according to the report, "the dangers of cutting and transporting wood."

Oil generation has the next highest risk factor of 1,939 man-days while coal-fired generation has the worst potential, 2,083 man-days.

"Risk to human health does not start when an electricity-generating plant or solar panel put out energy," says Inhaber, trying to explain the surprising conclusions.

"It starts when an engineer first puts pencil to paper, continues as materials are acquired, fabricated and installed and terminates only when the installation is dismantled at the end of its useful life."

He says even such catastrophic risks as radioactive emissions from nuclear reactors or ruptured oil or gas pipelines were taken into account, but notes that the few systems with the potential for serious accident are not necessarily those with the highest risk.

The reason wind and solar power failed to measure up to expectations is mainly because of the air pollution that results from smelting steel used in building facilities for these systems. Pollution effects also are the main reason for the hig risk attached to oil and coal systems.

Sex Charge Closes Mill

The Ravenn Lumber Ltd. sawmill in Campbell River remained shut down today while the Labor Relations Board (LRB) studied employee charges that a supervisor tried to force sexual favors from female workers.

More than 100 employees at the mill walked off the job Friday, calling for dismissal of the supervisor and reinstatement of two female employees who said they had quit because the supervisor's sexual harassment became intolerable.

The dispute affects about 40 workers in related Campbell River lumber operations. Negotiations between union and management have failed to resolve the dispute.

Although the company applied Monday to the LRB for a back-to-work order, Lorne Scott, president of International Woodworkers of America, Local 1-363, said Tuesday the crew may disobey any order.

The trouble began, he said, when workers discovered that the two women — casual employees assigned to weekend and relief cleanup at the mill — stopped coming to work.

Doris Riel, one of the women, said in a written statement to the union that the supervisor offered her liquor and told her she could do four hours work and get eight hours pay.

She said it became clear between her hiring in November, 1977, and her last paycheque in January that what he had in mind was a proposition of sexual relations.

Scott said he could not release the second woman's name because she has not filed a formal complaint. He said similar allegations about the supervisor have been made since November, 1976.

Company president Pat Martin said the company offered to take the man off the job for one week to investigate the charges, but the sawmill crew refused the offer. He said the company feels there is insufficient evidence to take action now and the supervisor denies the charges.

Scott said the two women are not union members because of their casual employment and do not have recourse to grievance procedures.

Smith Credits Kissinger

LONDON (AP) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith says his white-minority government began negotiating for majority rule after former state secretary Henry Kissinger convinced him "we probably would not be able to continue to survive" otherwise.

In an television interview broadcast Tuesday night, Smith said Kissinger told him in 1976 that world pressure against Rhodesia would increase until the government sought some way to turn the country over to its black majority.

"So we therefore came to the simple conclusion that under those circumstances we probably would not be able to continue to survive," Smith said in the BBC interview.

Smith, 58, unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965 to head off black rule in Rhodesia, where blacks outnumber whites 20 to 1. Smith and black moderates recently reached agreement on a plan to turn the government over to blacks.

He said the new agreement with internally based black leaders is only a first step toward majority rule. The final step will be to draw up a constitution and that "will be a long process," he said.

Meany Backs Tariffs

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany said Tuesday Americans will be "reduced to shining one another's shoes" unless the United States abandons its free trade tradition and protects U.S. industry.

"The world has changed," Meany said after the AFL-CIO's executive council called for a broad range of measures to protect U.S. manufacturing.

The 83-year-old labor leader said U.S. trade unions traditionally have supported the concept of free trade, in which foreign goods are allowed to enter U.S. markets free of restrictions and penalties.

"We're trading in a world where practically every country in the world has various devices and methods of protecting their own people," said Meany. "We are theoretically the only free traders left, and we feel the time has come that we no longer look at the word 'protectionism' as a bad word — that we are looking for protection."

Meany, who has headed the AFL-CIO — the 13.6 million-member federation of unions — since 1955, depicted a world in which the balance of power in business is changing.

"For many years, we felt we could compete," he said, but "we're not competing with the old European cartels anymore. We're competing with multi-national corporations, practically all American-controlled in one way or another."

He also said the flow of Japanese imports is a serious threat.

TV Ad Ban Eyed for Junk Foods

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission is about to consider several proposals to cut severely television advertising aimed at children, an FTC official says.

Tracy Westen, who headed the team of FTC employees that spent months developing the proposals, outlined them in an interview Tuesday.

They include:

—Banning advertising on television programs with substantial audiences of children aged six years old or under.

—Prohibiting television ads for highly sugared foods aimed at older children, perhaps seven to 12 years old, by limiting such ads to after 9 p.m.

—Requiring advertisers of other products designed to appeal to seven- to 12-year-olds to buy extra time for "counter-advertising" to present health, safety or nutritional information about such products.

Westen, deputy director of the commission's bureau of consumer protection, said the staff recommendations will be formally announced Monday.

The staff recommendations must be approved by the commission before becoming effective.

EXPECTATIONS NOW EXPECTORATIONS?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hamilton Jordan may be hampered in carrying out his duties as President Carter's chief aide as a result of allegations that he was in a bar altercation with a young woman, Carter's chief spokesman said Tuesday.

Press secretary Jody Powell faced lengthy questioning at the daily White House news briefing about the alleged incident. The Washington Post reported Sunday that Jordan, rebuffed in his attempt to strike up a conversation with a woman in a Washington singles bar, spat his drink down the front of her blouse.

Jordan denied the allegation. On Monday, the White House released 33 pages of statements about the allegations, including the comments of a bartender who said he had not seen such an incident take place.

Asked about a rumor that at White House request the FBI was investigating, Powell said: "That's not true and it's just an example of the sleazy crap that is coming out on this."

Asked whether he thinks the allegations will hamper Jordan, Powell said: "Clearly the publication of anonymous attacks on a man's reputation that are also untrue aren't very helpful in a man's doing his job."

Powell said that as far as he knows, Carter has not spoken to Jordan about the allegation.

In a speech to the House of Representatives on Tuesday, Representative Robert Michel of Illinois, House Republican whip, termed the reported incident "a far cry from the high hopes many had for this administration when it took office. Are we to conclude that in one year the Carter administration has gone from great expectations to great expectorations?"

Drought Cuts Coffee Crop

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A six-week drought in two major coffee-growing states has destroyed more than 10 per cent of the current crop in Brazil, the world's leading coffee producer, state officials said today.

Federal Commerce and Industry Minister Angelo Calmon de Sa last week predicted a drop from original production estimates and said it probably will push international coffee prices up soon.

Officials in the southern states of Parana and Sao Paulo said more than 2.8 million bags have been lost from the 1977-78 crop—originally estimated at 20.8 million of the 132-pound bags.

"Our latest crop estimate today has gone down some 1.06 million bags to 4.26 million bags," said Agriculture Secretary Paulo Carneiro Ribeiro of Parana state.

Jose Ary Morales Agudo, president of Sao Paulo state's Agricultural Federation Coffee Commission, said that the coffee harvest there, initially expected to reach 5.8 million bags, will not surpass four million bags because of the drought.

Parana's coffee region received its first light rain in more than 45 days Monday night, Ribeiro said, and more rain was expected tonight.

"But the damage has already been done," Ribeiro said. He said a pest called the "miner bug," which destroys the leaves of coffee trees, had reproduced rapidly because of the lack of rain.

In Sao Paulo, Morales Agudo said, heat and dryness are causing the coffee beans to rot. The forecast for the Sao Paulo coffee-growing country indicated chances of light rain tonight and Wednesday.

The Brazilian Coffee Institute said its survey of crop damage is not yet complete. The institute said that the heart of Parana's coffee region recorded its lowest precipitation level in 24 years last month.

Van Recall From Ford

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. is recalling about 47,000 U.S.-built vans and trucks to check for possible automatic transmission defects.

Involved are 1978-model Econoline vans, Club wagons, Broncos and F-Series pickup trucks equipped with optional tilt steering wheels and automatic transmissions. Another 2,600 Canadian-built models also will be checked.

A Ford spokesman said in some of the units a transmission selector-lever reaction spring may have been assembled wrong.

Ottawa Borrowing to Save the Dollar

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham) said the action was taken to stop the "financial hemmorhage" affecting the dollar and asked whether Chretien knew about it.

Chretien indicated he had, saying he spoke to the governor of the Bank of Canada both days.

The central bank had intervened in the normal way to make sure fluctuation of the dollar was normal and not overly affected by speculation.

Chretien wouldn't confirm the figures Conservatives used. He said the figures will be known March 7.

Lawrence said Chretien was admitting the Bank of Canada intervention Monday and Tuesday was "extraordinary." Stevens demanded that Chretien apologize to the House for "an ct of political cowardice" in not coming to the Commons and telling MPs "the truth."

Chretien replied that the decision leading to his statement Tuesday night had been taken a few hours earlier and he had to wait until stock markets closed.

He reiterated that finance ministers never comment in the House on borrowing intentions.

In New York, foreign exchange traders gave a mixed reception today to the Canadian government's decision to intervene in support of the sagging Canadian dollar.

"I think it's wonderful — and about time," said a senior trader at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company. "In the long run, it is going to do a lot of good."

"It's nothing new," commented a trader in the New York branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. "They have been in and out of the market all along with small amounts. It will tend to hold the dollar but I don't think it is going to go very high."

The Canadian dollar slumped in value on foreign currency markets to a 45 year low when it traded below 89 cents U.S. Monday and closed Tuesday at 89.49 cents in relation to the American dollar.

The devaluation accelerated this week after a steady decline over the last 15 months from an exchange rate of $1.03 U.S. in November 1976.

While pressure on the Canadian dollar has resulted from a decline in both the Canadian and U.S. currencies, foreign exchange rates are a reflection on the slack Canadian economy — nine per cent inflation, 8.3 per cent unemployment and an estimated $5 billion annual deficit on foreign transactions.

Conservative MP Jim Gillies, a former economics professor, termed the planned foreign borrowing "a tragic commentary on the economic condition of the country."

Gillies said that if the borrowing fails to halt the decline of the dollar, the next step would be borrowing from the International Monetary Fund, which could demand a say in Canada's economic policies as a condition.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent, reached by telephone in Winnipeg, said: "The action is overdue to bolster the dollar."

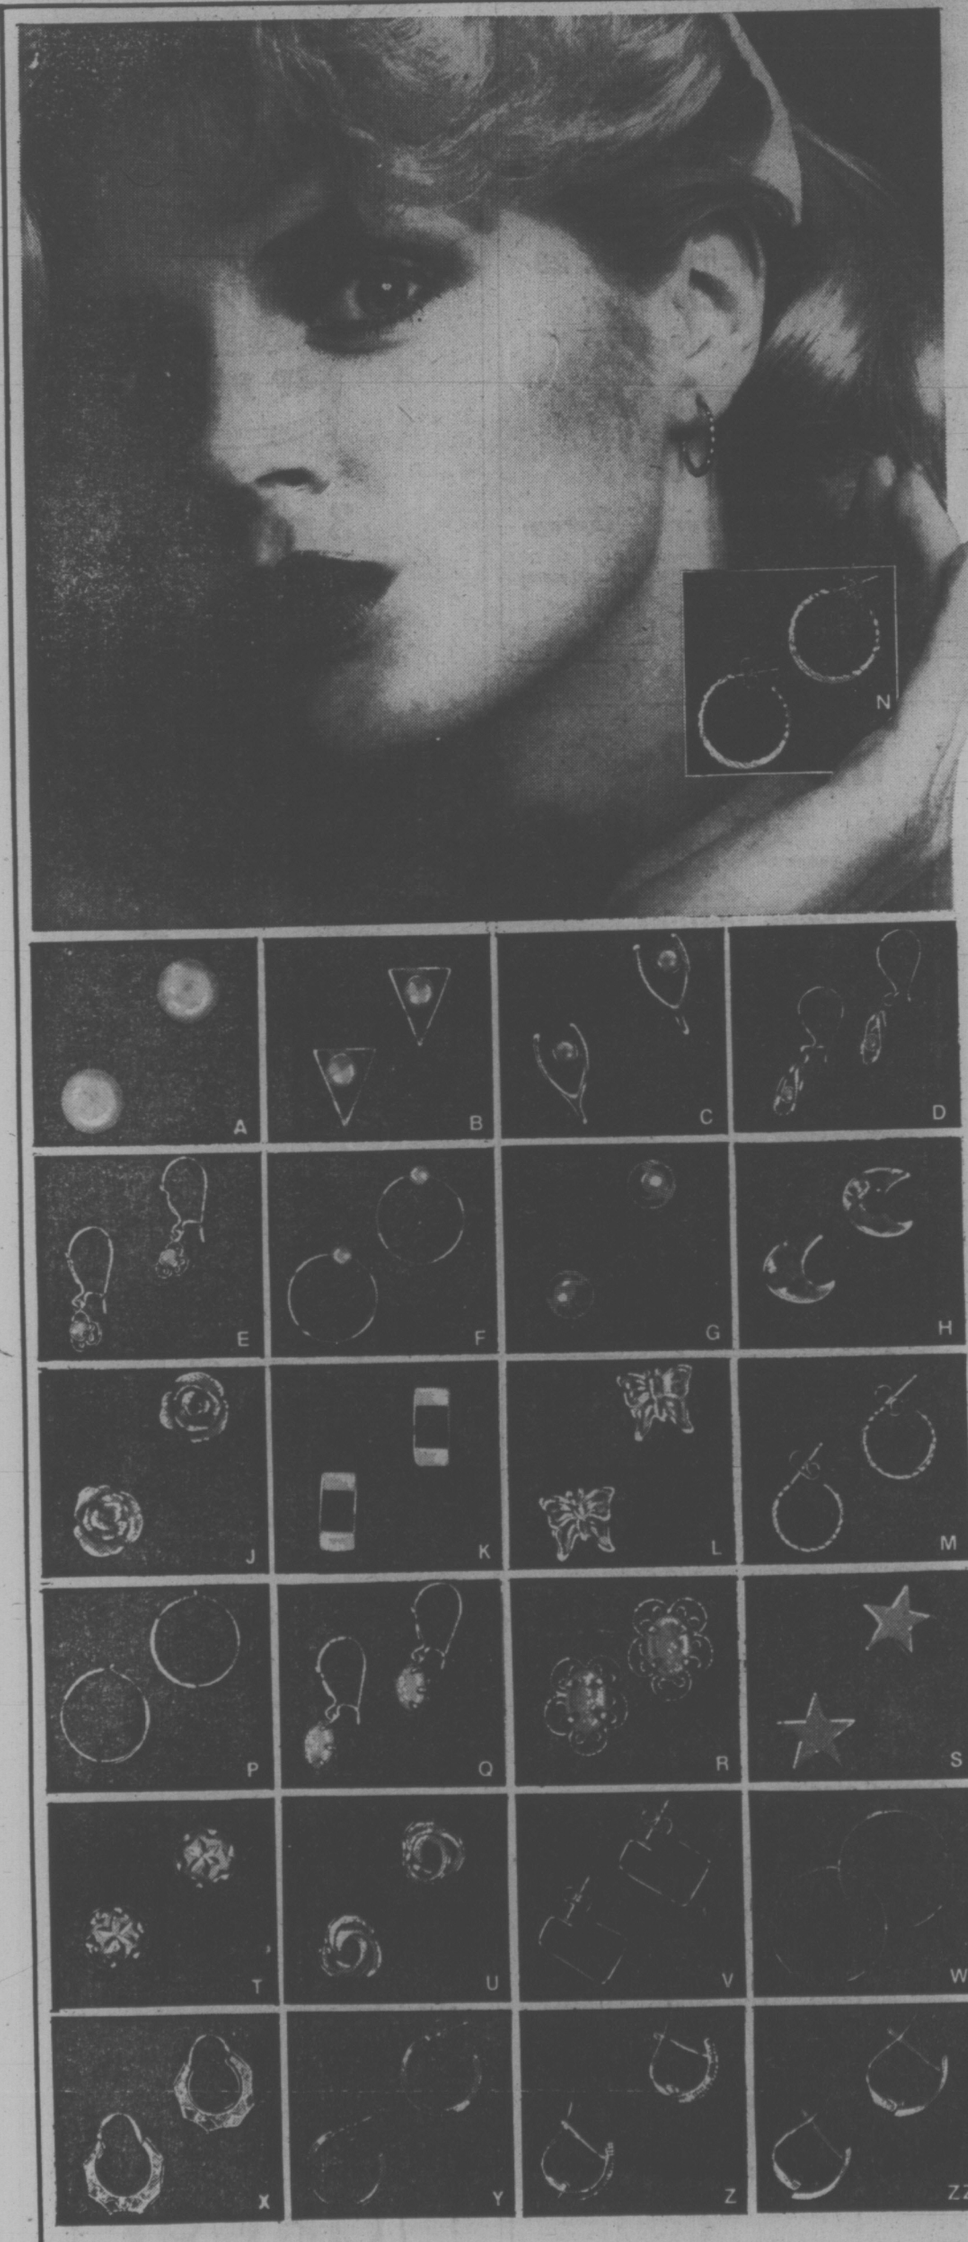

"As a short term answer," he added, "the action reflects the terrible state of the Canadian economy."

Broadbent said the borrowing is only a stop-gap measure and that the government must move rapidly to restore financial credibility.

Clearing the Window On Community Living

Hospitality consists in a little fire,
a little food,
and an immense quiet

Those words looked down at me from a small poster on the living room wall as I sat sipping coffee and eating peasant bread with Anne Pask and friends.

It was a bit early in the day perhaps for a fire but there was a little food and certainly an immense quiet and a kind of built-in feeling of relaxation within the walls of the lovely big house.

Perched almost precariously high on the rocks of Fairfield, it commands a breathtaking view of the city, the sea and the mountains beyond. But I didn't go there to look at the house, nor to gaze out of the windows. I went to talk of life, of friendship and of sharing.

For the house called Shalom (which simply means Peace to You) is a community home. And that's what Anne wanted to talk about.

"This is just one of many examples of community living here," she explained. "But it's one that is a little different."

There are, she said, the world-wide L'Arche Community homes established basically for the handicapped in the 1960s by French Canadian doctor Jean Vanier and of which there are four in Victoria.

The Pacific Life Community has a home on Menzies Street (and another in Burnaby) where the concept of non-violent living is practised.

And there are several other group homes, like those operated by Lifeline, where the troubled souls of alcoholics, drug addicts or former convicts may find a haven.

But Shalom is none of those things.

Spread over more than 3,000 square feet with two huge living rooms, three bathrooms and six spacious bedrooms which afford privacy in the moments one might want to be alone, Shalom is not associated with any group or church.

"It is simply a home for working adults who may perhaps be new to Victoria, who may perhaps be from a broken marriage, and who choose to live as a community rather than alone in an apartment," said Anne. "It meets a need at a certain time in a person's life."

The very grand house was built by a United Church minister 10 years ago to be "a study and renewal centre for a loving community." The minister's dream was never realized but the house did become, some four years ago, a community home where, as Anne said, "six fairly mature, open persons seek to live in a caring community, in alert communication, sharing household tasks, and the fireside, the sunsets . . . and the evening meal."

Though she doesn't like to talk about herself, I did learn that Anne Pask, a nurse for many years with the Victorian Order of Nurses, was zone supervisor for National Health in the Yukon for five years and later ran her own psychiatric halfway house in Victoria before moving to Shalom.

Other residents at the moment include a high school teacher, a radiographer, a woman executive in a Crown corporation and a freelance writer. And Anne pointed out that in the four years there have been a lot of interesting people living at Shalom, people from all walks of life and from 19 to 65.

And where do I fit in, you may ask. Well, Anne wanted to clear the window on community living and she thought I might be able to help.

"I get so much flak," she explained, "people laughingly referring to 'my commune' and so on and they have no idea what community living is and find it hard to imagine.

"Many people think of it merely as communes where very young people live in a casual style and share everything — including the beds. But all community living is not like that at all. Ours is a sharing of tasks and of company, really, and a growing through sharing.

"I want to get across the idea that this is not something that is sick or weird but something that is healthy and, in fact, necessary because there are so many isolated, alienated people in the world today."

I know she is right for surely in our age of technology, in all corners of the world the big problem people face is the problem of being alone, and perhaps not loved, not cared for.

And as we say goodbye, Anne and I, another poster in the hallway catches my eye. Written by Kahlil Gibran and entitled Your House is Your Larger Body, it is quite fitting here and leaves the mind with a question:

What about your house? Is it merely a building which pleases your eye, housing things which you are proud to possess? Or is it a place of love?

And tell me, O people of Orphalese,
What have you in these houses?
What is it you guard with fastened doors?
Have you peace, the quiet urge that reveals your power?

Have you remembrances, the glimmering arches that span the summits of the mind?
Have you beauty, that leads the heart from things fashioned of wood and stone to the holy mountain?

Or have you only comfort and the lust for comfort that stealthy thing that enters the house as a guest and then becomes a host, and then a monster?

Verily the lust for comfort murders the passion of the soul, and then walks grinning in the funeral

But you, children of space,
you restless in rest,
You shall not be trapped or tamed,
Your house shall not be an anchor but a mast

Chairman Charles Dalfen told CBC official to consider the 'unique' idea of an advisory committee on local programming

'Baby Step' For City Says CBC

Substantial local content and community programming must wait until the CBC's Victoria station becomes established, vice-president in charge of corporate relations Ron Fraser said Monday.

The CBC is taking "a baby step" by expanding its English television network to Vancouver Island, Fraser told a Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission hearing.

"If we don't come into Victoria now, we never will," he said.

Developing entertaining local television takes time and money, Fraser said, adding the CBC has funds to provide only seven and one-half hours of local programming a week at its proposed Victoria broadcast centre.

"But one hour a day devoted to the community is a tremendous resource, depending on how you use it," Fraser said.

He was responding to attacks on a CBC progress report to the commission by Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber.

Substantial local content is the only justification for spending millions of dollars of the taxpayers money on the CBC station, Barber said.

The CBC got a licence last March to open a $7 million radio-television studio on Blanshard in September, but has delayed construction a year.

It is supposed to introduce distinctive island programming.

Barber called for 21 hours of local programming a week and input from a local advisory commission composed of business, labor, ethnic and community groups.

If Channels 6 and 10 are not to become repeater stations, the CRTC must make tough demands for local content, he recommended.

He criticized the CBC's failure to present a proposal to involve the community in its planning.

"We are getting a lesson in meteorology, not programming. I have seen nothing by CBC to indicate it will listen to the local community," Barber said.

He was told CBC has an advisory committee at the national level on an experimental basis and has no plans to start one at the local level.

"Committees get bogged down. We don't want to have too many barriers between the people who make the programs and the public," CBC regional director Len Lauk said.

But Lauk was told to consider the idea by CRTC chairman Charles Dalfen, who called the concept unique.

"Take the news and sports from seven and a half hours and you don't have much left to advise on," he said, adding that Lauk's response could be interpreted as an excuse for not doing more.

33% Hike Pressed By Urban

A Langford cablevison company Monday pressed its case for a 33-per-cent monthly fee hike and a five-year licence renewal.

Urban Cablevision Ltd. told a Canadian Radio-television Telecommunications Commission hearing it has improved the quality of its service at substantial cost to the company.

The company wants to increase installation rates to Langford subscribers from $15 to $25 and its monthly fee to all 6,300 subscribers to $6.50 from $5.

The monthly fee must increase to $6.50 to cover operating costs, the commission was told.

CRTC directives to improve technical quality, increase community programming, reduce salaries and open a business office in an established area have been complied with, according to the company's brief submitted to the hearing.

Staples Named To New Post

The RCMP officer who heads the Victoria drug squad has a change of title, new office, and enlarged responsibilities in the fight against the illicit drug trade.

Insp. Dave Staples has been named drug enforcement officer for the RCMP's District 2, an area of police management that includes the entire province outside the Lower Mainland.

Staples will work out of the new RCMP building on Blanshard.

Chief Superintendent Don Cliffe, officer in charge of the district, said Tuesday Staples' primary function is to achieve a greater co-ordination of investigations being carried out by police drug units throughout B.C.

Cliffe said the move comes in the wake of an increase in drug activities in regions outside Vancouver.

Superintendent Ed Trefry, who became officer in charge of the RCMP Victoria subdivision this week, replaces Staples on the drug squad, sharing the duties with Victoria police Insp. Lorne Shandley.

Hood Picked By Board

Former Victoria alderman Alf Hood has been nominated to replace lawyer Jack Cowan, recently appointed a judge in Vancouver, on the Victoria Police Board.

Hood's name will come before council for ratification at a night meeting Thursday.

The appointment would run from March 1, 1978, to Dec. 30, 1980.

At a police board meeting today Mayor Mike Young said Cowan has performed a sterling service for the commission and the board and will be missed.

Young also said he thinks Hood would make an excellent replacement.

Susan Mair Top Teen

Seventeen-year-old Susan Mair of Reynolds Secondary School was chosen Miss Teen Victoria Tuesday night over nine rivals in a competition at The Empress.

She will go to Toronto next week to compete for the title of Miss Teen Canada.

First runner-up in the Victoria competiton was Jennifer Power, of Oak Bay Secondary, while second runner-up was Sally Yeh, of Claremont.

About 400 people attended the competition and fashion show in the Crystal Ballroom. The event was organized by CJVI.

Miss Mair is president of the Reynolds graduation committee and is a member of the students council. She is active in the drama club and her hobbies include painting and playing the guitar.

She is a volunteer worker with emotionally disturbed children at the Eric Martin Institute.

Mayor Orders Police Report On Juveniles

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Victoria police have been directed to produce a comprehensive report on juvenile delinquency in the city, Mayor Mike Young said Tuesday.

Young said he expects the report to provide him with "a police blotter profile" on what the problems are and where they're occurring.

"It will provide details on the numbers (of juveniles) involved and who they are as a class," Young said.

The report, to be ready in two weeks, will provide Young with the research data he feels he needs before making any firm recommendations to city council on the possibility of a juvenile curfew for the city.

"I'm confident we can do something once we've clearly identified the problem."

Last week Young said that increasing juvenile delinquency problems might lead to the introduction of a law that would give police the power to stop and arrest juveniles who were on the streets late at night.

Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe, who is now in the process of completing a report to council on the city's policing system, has strongly opposed the curfew proposal as has Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith.

Both Smith and Blencoe say a curfew cannot be enforced and even if it could, it would not solve the delinquency problem.

"I'm opposed to curfews because: A, they're practically impossible to enforce, and B, they're a step back into the dark ages," said Blencoe.

Blencoe said police should try heading off delinquency problems before they develop by increasing contact with juveniles.

In his report, Blencoe recommends a team-policing system for Victoria. Team-policing, which has been succesfully adopted in Vancouver and Calgary, stresses contact between law enforcement officers and the community to which they're assigned.

Despite the criticisms from Blencoe and Smith, Young said the possibility of a curfew for Victoria is still very real.

During an interview, however, Young said that if an alternative for adequately dealing with the problem can be found he would endorse it.

He said that a small percentage of juveniles in the city are the trouble makers, but a curfew would have to apply to all of them.

"Unfortunately the word curfew implies a control over the action of all children, but what I'm really looking for is an instrument to deal with the problem (children)."

"It is not the intention to have a martial law type of curfew but simply to ensure that the police have a method of controlling juveniles who are wandering at large at late hours."

Asked if he is considering a law that would order all persons under 18 off the streets by 11 p.m., for example, Young replied that his recommendations to council "might restrict the movement of children at night . . . but I don't know what age categories."

BOOM AT NOON NO BIG BOON

The proposal to have a cannon boom at noon from Laurel Point every day has run into opposition from area residents who say they don't want to be reminded of the last two world wars.

In a letter to city council David Reilly, president of the James Bay Community Association, says that his organization is dead against the cannon proposal by Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd. and Delta Hotels Ltd.

"Many of our members have lived through one or more wars and have no desire to hear a military cannon remind them of those times every noon," wrote Reilly.

Council will consider the complaint Thursday night.

Frantic Finish Seen For Licence Decals

A record crush is looming for last-minute shoppers for ICBC insurance and licence plate decals.

R.G. Whitlock, superintendent of the motor-vehicle branch, said he had never seen things so slow in the early going.

"We are in for a busy finish, that's for sure."

It is illegal to drive next Wednesday without new decals on the licence and a 1978 insurance package.

"Those still planning to get their decals by mail will be out of luck," Whitlock said. "They will have to leave their cars at home Wednesday unless they are lucky and get their decals back by then."

The motor-vehicle branch, 431 Menzies, will open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday to give motorists an extra opportunity to make purchases.

"The best time to come in is at 8:30 Saturday morning or in the afternoon. The office is usually closed on Saturdays and many people won't know about it. The worst time would be about 3 p.m. on Friday. The line-up should be very long at that time."

Whitlock said the office will stay open as long as possible on Tuesday, the last day, to sell decals to everyone in the line.

"We won't slam the door on anyone but at some point, after everyone is inside, we will have to lock the door. After that it will be too late to get in."

Normal closing hour on weekdays is 5 p.m. Those inside by that time should be able to get their decals, he said.

Insurance and decals can also be purchased at private insurance companies across the city.

Business is brisk at private insurance companies and line-ups are becoming long, especially at companies operating in shopping centres. Company spokesman say it can only get worse between now and Tuesday night.

Ruck Quits as Head of NHL Services

ATLANTA (CP) — Don V. Ruck is out as president of the National Hockey League Services and vice-president in charge of the league public relations.

Ruck, who had been with the league for 12 years, submitted his resignation Tuesday during a meeting of the NHL board of governors.

In another development, the NHL board decided to accept the idea of playing an unbalanced schedule, effective with the 1978-79 season.

The resignation of Ruck came as no great shock. He had been under fire from several governors recently for his direction of NHLS and was accused of mismanaging the organization in a newspaper report last month.

NHL president John Ziegler defended Ruck after the report appeared, but it was evident some governors did not want Ruck around. Speculation surfaced during the all-star break that Ruck would be through with the league June 1.

But now, Ruck is unemployed and just what he will be pursuing is not known.

"I plan to take a short vacation and go to work on my plans for the future," Ruck said in a prepared statement.

He said his resignation was caused "by a difference of judgment between myself and the members of the board as to the future direction of NHLS."

"The governors have indicated that they wish to seriously explore a policy of contracting third parties to supply their services. I cannot agree with this position and thus I feel I must resign."

Ruck was present at Tuesday's sessions but will return to New York today.

Ziegler praised Ruck for his efforts with the NHLS, which oversees all activities concerning television, licensing and publications.

"He played a major role in seeing the NHL move from a six-team league to its present 18 teams," Ziegler said. "We conceived the idea and personally developed NHL services to the point where today we can explore other marketing opportunities which, but for him, would not have been available."

The governors spent a good deal of time discussing other future plans, including proposals for realignment.

"We had hoped to get some geographical realignment here," said George Gund III, owner of Cleveland Barons. "We wanted realignment and an unbalanced schedule and we got the unbalanced schedule.

"We will be playing more against teams in our own division without the realignment. That's going to hurt us as far as winning games goes, because we are up against three of the top six teams in the league—Boston, Buffalo and Toronto.

"Now we will play eight games against each of those teams and less with the other clubs. That didn't turn out as we hoped."

Each NHL club will play each of its 17 opponents four times—twice at home and twice away—for a total of 68 games. The remaining 12 games will be intra-division affairs.

Sport — And Those Who Make It Tick

The best thing about the wunnerful worlda sport is its people-solid, serious, dedicated people. People like:

Grey and Davis Inc., New York, N.Y., who filed the following press release:

HOUSTON, Texas—Calvin Murphy, star Houston Rockets' guard—and latest recipient of the Gordon's Gin Good Guy Award for helping young women raise their level of self esteem through baton twirling—says it creates "pride and self respect in the girls."

Due to a rather vague pronoun reference, we are left to decide for ourselves what creates the pride and self-respect in the girls—the twirling, or the gin.

It must be the twirling. Historically, the virtue of gin has been that it tended to play hell with the virtue of the imbiber, often to the delight of the imbibee. Many a nerd has turned into a Good Guy when viewed through the bottom of a glass.

Admittedly, the foregoing is hearsay. My own experimentation with gin was cut short by a personal tragedy.

I'd been given a recording of Flanders and Swan singing Have Some Madeira, M'Dear. (Madeira is a wine of some note. If there is a Madeira Good Guy Award it would be for helping young women lower their level of self-esteem to the horizontal).

Two lines burned themselves into my brain:

The evil gin does would be hard to assess.

And besides, it is inclined to effect my correct prowess.

I've never been able to touch the stuff since.

Donald Montgomery, secretary of the Canadian Labor Congress:

On Monday, Montgomery said that with almost one million workers unemployed "it would be an act of criminal irresponsibility to place jobs at risk, even for serious environmental considerations."

Admittedly, Montgomery is not a world-famous athlete. But his approach would have an interesting effect on recreation and presumably he shares the basic needs of the athlete: to breathe, to eat and to stay alive.

But by all means, jobs first and environment second. Hell of a campaign, that. Lends itself to so many slogans:

BLACKTOP—GOOD AND GOOD FOR YOU!
WORK, DON'T INHALE!
JOBS, SI! OXYGEN, NO!
SPRAY NOW, PAY LATER!

Frank Beaton, defenceman, Birmingham Bulls, arrested Sunday during a game between the Bulls and Cincinnati Stingers in Cincinnati; and his coach, Glen Somner:

As the first period ended, Beaton noticed six policemen. Obviously he had a hunch why they were there. Instead of going to Birmingham's dressing room he went to Cincinnati's. When the police found him he was trying to climb through a window.

Somner leaped to his tiger's defence.

"You must not have any crime at all in this city if they can have six policemen wait around in a locker room just to arrest one man," he said.

Possibly, Glen, it was because the assault charge against Beaton dates back two years to when he was playing for Cincinnati and the police say he's "slipped away" from them two or three times.

What I find intriguing is that the Cincinnati police waited until the end of the first period. He must have been playing well. If he'd been playing badly, maybe they'd have waited until the game was over.

Willie Horton, ex-Detroit Tiger currently in the employee of Texas Rangers of baseball's American League:

Horton says he's considering a lawsuit against Ron LeFlore of the Tigers for "tarnishing my image" in his book, Breakout.

Willie is upset because on page 32 LeFlore claims Horton did nothing to encourage him when he came to the Tigers because LeFlore was taking publicity away from Horton as the team's top star.

"My image as a ballplayer in Detroit has been to help my team-mates, black or white," Horton says. "Everybody knows that. But the image is tarnished now."

Gee. I wonder how many dollars it will take to scrub it clean?

Malcolm Anderson, world record-holding soccer coach:

Anderson established his record—"shortest term of employment, one coach"—with Memphis Rogues of the North American Soccer League. He was signed Nov. 30 and fired Feb. 20, without his team ever having played a game.

When the Rogues hired him they said they were getting a brilliant if irresponsible man, but one of the greatest soccer coaches in the world. They even billed him as the Billy Martin of soccer. Now, without explanation, they've fired him.

Frankly, I think there are grounds for suit.

The mark of the good coach is consistency. Allison's record with the Rogues is perfect: 0-0-0.

This will probably tarnish hell out of his image.

Maybe he should talk to Horton.

STOPS 58 SHOTS IN COUGAR VICTORY

Amiss Blocks Blades

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Steve Amiss has a way of knowing the hockey season is moving along. He's playing well.

Victoria Cougars' goaltender did it again Tuesday. He faced the awesome total of 60 shots, allowed only two goals and carried his team to a 7-2 Western Canada Hockey League victory over the Saskatoon Blades.

And that's been the story for more than a month, although not always as obvious as it was in Memorial Arena on Tuesday.

Inconsistent at the start of the year, the redhead, brimming with confidence now, has been the big reason the Cougars have moved up from the basement and have been doggedly protecting a slender grip on second place in the Western Division.

"I don't know why it is," Amiss said after his latest performance, "but I do start slowly. In my first year in Nanaimo (with Victoria's tier two affiliate), I didn't start playing well until after Christmas."

Amiss reckoned he "was busy" but that's the way he likes it.

"My best games are ones in which I have a lot of work to do. I guess all goalies are like that."

Saskatoon and even the Cougars saw to it that he got work Tuesday.

The Blades managed it by applying pressure with extremely good positional play.

The Cougars didn't make things any easier by coming up with an almost-disastrous penalty-taking style. Victoria's game total included three misconducts, four majors and 15 minors for a total of 80 minutes. Saskatoon's count was three misconducts, three majors and only 10 minors for 65 minutes.

The big difference, perhaps more than 15 minutes worth, was Victoria's affinity for taking senseless penalties. Referee Paul Corchrane might have been judged a trifle on the inconsistent side but even Victoria coach Jack Shupe felt "we got what we deserved."

And Shupe didn't like it.

The Cougars came close to setting a North American and Olympic record for "dumb" penalties — the kind that come after play has been whistled dead, one-way retaliation, or when the team already was playing shorthanded.

"Those are the penalties they take when they aren't working," Shupe said bluntly. "When you play poorly you take bad penalties. And once it started, everybody went out to take bad penalties."

It started in the second period. Cougars opened the period with a 2-1 lead. The Blades outshot Victoria 21-7 during that 20 minutes yet the Cougars, rather surprisingly, came out with a 4-2 lead. That's when Amiss "stoned" the Blades although the netminder figured he had a more difficult time of it in the opening period when the Blades fired 22 shots at him.

Amiss did get tremendous support from defenceman Leroy Heck. He was outstanding defensively and reaped just reward on offense by picking up a goal and three assists. Two of his plays led to goals (by Geordie Robertson and Dennis Fenske) while the Cougars were shorthanded.

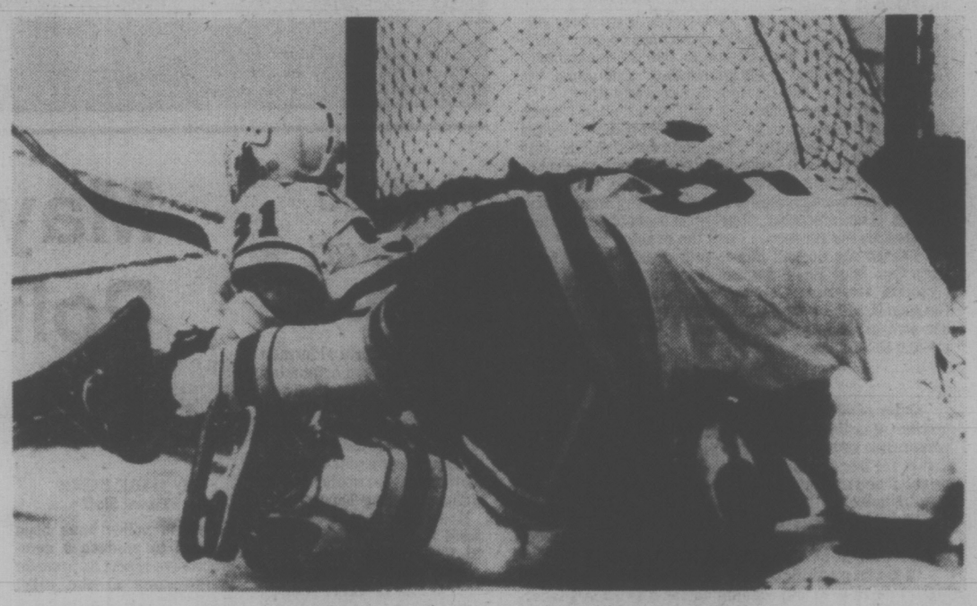

Gary Lupul, Mike Shields, Bill Jobson and Curt Fraser scored the other goals for the Cougars, who directed only 35 shots at two Saskatoon goalies — Dean Berger and Ken McLabb.

Bryan Baron and Wes George scored Saskatoon's goals, both bouncing into the net off Amiss' skates. Baron got his in the first when a hard shot hit a goal post, came out to hit the back of Amiss' skate, and then went into the net. George got his when he came out of a corner and Amiss appeared to anticipate a passout.

The win kept the Cougars one point ahead of third-place Seattle Breakers, who recorded a 4-1 victory over the touring Flin Flon Bombers.

Former Cougar Greg Tebbutt scored the only Flin Flon goal and also managed three minors, a major and a misconduct.

In other games Tuesday, the West Division-leading Portland Winter Hawks, sparked by Dale Yakiwchuk's four goals, defeated the Pats 8-4 in Regina while Lethbridge Broncos rallied from a 3-0 deficit to trip Calgary Wranglers 6-4.

BIG EFFORT FAILS as goalie Michel Plasse and defenceman Barry Beck of Colorado Rockies get tangled up in front of goal while puck shot by Boston's Peter McNab zips into net above them. McNab scored two first-period goals at Denver as Bruins clipped Rockies 3-2 in National Hockey League game.

DRUG-TEST MACHINE FOR GAMES

EDMONTON (CP) — A machine costing $166,000 will be used to test Commonwealth Games athletes for improper use of drugs, Gordon Miniely, Alberta hospitals minister, has announced.

Dr. Hal Bell, head of laboratory medicine at the University of Alberta hospital here, said the machine is being programmed to detect the 125 drugs banned by the International Olympic Committee.

After the games, the unit, paid for by the provincial government, will remain at the hospital for research, monitoring drug levels in patients, investigating metabolic disorders and assessing drug abuse.

Horsemen Suspended

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Racing Commission announced Monday it has suspended veteran harness horseman Keith Waples for 90 days and fined him $3,000 for claiming violations.

Ron Waples, Keith's cousin, was also fined and Barry Drury, another horseman, was fined and suspended.

Bruins Crowd Sabres

By The Canadian Press

Boston Bruins have won the Adams Division championship in the National Hockey League the last two seasons, and they'd like to keep it for a third.

Peter McNab scored two goals and assisted on another as the Bruins defeated Colorado Rockies 3-2 Tuesday night, pulling into a first-place tie with Buffalo Sabres. Boston, with two games in hand, has a 36-13-7 record for 79 points, the same number Buffalo has from a 33-12-13 log.

The Boston-Buffalo rivalry, in which the Sabres took first place in the division in 1974-75, the first season under the current alignment, has produced the league's best first-place battle this year. The prize of course, is a bye into the playoff quarter-finals, avoiding the perilous best-of-three preliminary round.

In other games, Pittsburgh Penguins edged St. Louis Blues 5-4 and Los Angeles Kings dumped Washington Capitals 4-1.

In the only World Hockey Association game, J. C. Tremblay's goal in overtime gave Quebec Nordiques a 6-5 victory over New England Whalers.

The Rockies scored first at Denver as rookie Joe Contini netted his ninth goal in 26 games at 6:07 of the first period, slamming the puck past Boston goaltender Gerry Cheevers as they collided in front of the net. Cheevers was hurt and was relieved by Ron Grahame.

The Bruins bounced right back with the tying goal by McNab 13 seconds later after winning a faceoff in the Colorado end.

McNab made it 2-1 at 11:19 of the period as he barged between two Colorado defencemen, fired once and potted the rebound.

He later played an important role in Boston's third goal, getting the puck from behind the Colorado net and drilling a pass to Rick Middleton, who scored against goalie Michel Plasse.

The Rockies tried to force play in the third period of the penalty-free game as they outshot Boston 11-3 but got only one goal, by Andy Spruce.

Rookie Peter Lee scored on a breakaway midway through the third period to break a 4-4 tie and lift the Penguins to their triumph over the Blues at St. Louis.

Other goals by Jean Pronovost, John Flesch, Rick Kehoe and Wayne Bianchin helped push the Penguins' unbeaten streak to six games, their longest of the season.

Tony Currie, called up earlier in the day from Salt Lake City Goldel Eagles of the Central Hockey League, scored the first St. Louis goal, and others came from Barry Gibbs, Bill Fairbairn and Brian Sutter.

Butch Goring scored two goals on passes from Randy Manery to break open a close game and lead the Kings to their victory against the Capitals at Landover, Md.,

Glen Goldup and Pete Stemkowski scored earlier goals for Los Angeles, while Mike Marson had Washington's only goal.

At Quebec City, Tremblay's goal at 3:38 of sudden-death overtime propelled the Nordiques past New England. Real Cloutier scored two goals for Quebec, while Normand Dube, Warren Miller and Andre Boudrias had one each. Alan Hangsleben, Johnny McKenzie, Larry Pleau, Gordie Howe and Dave Keon scored for the Whalers.

NEW FORMAT'S FINE BUT NOT OLD NAME

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship has become a misnomer in the revamped format in which the prize money has been doubled to $100,000, says George Knudson.

Winner of the last two CPGA titles, Knudson said Monday the usual Canadian contingent supplemented by upwards of 30 "outsiders" for this year's tournament in Vancouver takes away the nationalistic element.

Canada's foremost touring professional sees nothing wrong with the new format, in which PGA champions from other countries along with several members from the U.S. PGA tour will be invited to bolster the field.

The tournament previously was restricted to CPGA members only.

Knudson, in fact, finds the new format appealing.

What does disturb him, however, is that the sponsors continue to call it the CPGA championship.

"They have no right to call it a Canadian PGA championship," he said. "The idea is fine, but I think the CPGA missed the boat somewhere.

"There's no doubt it probably will be a better tournament, and playing for the extra $50,000 is just great. That's what the sponsor wants and that's what they deserve. . . . But call it the Labatt's Invitational, not the CPGA championship."

The Canadian championship is sponsored by Labatt Breweries of Canada.

TWO MARTINIS, IF HE MAKES IT

SEATTLE (AP) — High-wire veteran Karl Wallenda, 73, has been signed to perform at the home baseball opener of Seattle Mariners April 5.

Wallenda plans to walk a 500-foot-long wire 150 feet over the diamond in the Kingdome in exchange for $8,000 and two extra-dry martinis "if I make it." As usual for Wallenda, there will be no net.

Ballard Bows

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs, faced with the threat of stiff fines, have decided to have players' names sewn to the back of their road sweaters in time for Sunday night's National Hockey League game in Chicago against the Black Hawks.

NHL president John Ziegler had advised Leafs owner Harold Ballard the team would face an escalating series of fines starting at $2,000 and rising to $5,000 if players didn't have the names on their road jerseys.

Stunning Ski Upset

LAHTI, Finland (AP) — Jozef Luszczek rallied in the closing stages to win Tuesday's 15-kilometre race at the world Nordic championships for Poland's first-ever gold medal in major cross-country skiing competition.

Luszczek nosed out Evgeny Belyaev of the Soviet Union and Finland's Juha Mieto in a tough finish with only five seconds separating them. Luszczek won by two seconds over Belyaev.

It was one of the most stunning upsets in years of cross-country skiing although the 22-year-old Pole had come from almost nowhere to grab the bronze medal in the 30-kilometre race Sunday.

Starting from the 73rd position in a field of 79, Luszczek ran second behind Mieto at the five-kilometre mark. He fell back to third, almost 15 seconds behind the Finn, at the next point before going all out in the last five-kilometre leg.

Luszczek finished the sprint distance in a time of 49 minutes 09.37 seconds. That was more than five minutes slower that than the winning time in the 1976 Olympics, a race run on a much easier course.

Elbow Skip Cool With Final Rock

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Art Knutson, who says "we don't panic," added a little substance to that statement Tuesday at the Canadian senior men's curling championship.

Knutson, skip of the Saskatchewan rink from Elbow, cooly drew to the eight-foot circle with his last rock to set up a 6-3 win over the Nova Scotia rink of Halifax's Hugh Little in sixth-round play.

It was the first meeting of top contenders and Saskatchewan held a shaky 4-3 lead over Nova Scotia after nine ends. But Knutson drew to the side of the eight foot, opposite an earlier shot, to leave two in the house.

Little had the hammer, but it blew through to give Saskatchewan the win, leaving the Prairie rink in a first-place tie at 5-1 with Ontario's Bill Wagner from Ottawa and the British Columbia rink of Kelly Carin from Kamloops.

The loss dropped Nova Scotia into a fourth-place deadlock with Prince Edward Island and Manitoba at 4-2.

In other sixth-round play, Ontario defeated the Saint John rink of Jim Murphy, representing New Brunswick, 8-1, B.C. defeated the Northern Ontario contingent of Tim Temeruski from Timmins, 12-4, Art Ballem from Charlottetown skipped P.E.I. to an 11-4 victory over Al Dusseault's Territories rink from Yellowknife, the Quebec team of Jim Wilson from Lachine downed Alberta's Jack Sharpe rink from Sherwood Park, 12-9, and Manitoba, skipped by George Laudrum of Winnipeg, edged the Newfoundland rink of Ralph Atwill from St. John's, 10-4.

In fifth-round play Tuesday morning, Saskatchewan whipped Northern Ontario 12-3, Ontario defeated Alberta 8-3, B.C. beat New Brunswick 10-3, Nova Scotia edged Newfoundland 7-6, P.E.I. overtime Quebec 9-7 and Manitoba downed the Territories 10-4.

BOB HAWKES NEEDS ONE MORE VICTORY

CRANBROOK — Defending-champion Bob Hawkes of Victoria was one victory away from a second straight B.C. police curling championship as play resumed today in the annual event.

Hawkes defeated Bill Thomas of Victoria 7-4 in the "A" final Tuesday. Both rinks were playing in the "B" event today. If Hawkes is defeated, the final will be held this afternoon. Playing with Hawkes are third Steve Holotuk, second Wayne Dew and lead Lyle Nurse.

Winner will represent B.C. in the national final at Moncton. Roy Gislason of Manitoba captured the 1977 championship in Victoria.

Braves Breeze

Saanich Braves had little trouble disposing of Esquimalt Legion 9-3 in a South Island Junior "B" Hockey League Patterson Division game at Pearkes Arena Tuesday night.

Bob Carey had three goals for the winners while Bill Adkin and Ed Beauchemin each scored twice. Murray McLaren and Steve Craig had singles.

Murray Allen, Russ and Kevin Kennedy scored for Esquimalt.

Mike Duch made 31 saves for Saanich while Ron Allan was called on to stop 39 shot at the Esquimalt goal.

Saanich meets Fuller Lake at Fuller Lake tonight to determine home-ice advantage for the playoff final between the two clubs. Saanich has 15 points and Fuller Lake 14 in post-season play.

Star Sidelined

MUNICH (Reuter) — Bob Latchford, leading scorer in English League First Division soccer, will miss Wednesday's exhibition game between England and West Germany here because of a hip injury.

Captain Cook's TREASURE CHEST

On the 200th Anniversary of Captain Cook's voyage to Vancouver Island, CJVI's Bruce McArthur, Mike Woodman and Ron Andrews have discovered 5 treasure chests overflowing with valuable prizes. To win one, just listen to CJVI/900 and phone in to guess the combination of the lock. You could win a King's ransom in beautiful prizes—like a Silver-Plated Coffee and Tea Service, an Instamatic Camera, a Boston Rocker or a Sewing Machine. And in each treasure chest there is a $100 bonus for you to spend on extra booty at the Hillside Shopping Centre.

Listen to CJVI and phone 388-7501 when you hear the rattling chains around the Captain Cook Treasure Chests. Or enter your name at the Hillside Shopping Centre and we'll phone you to guess the combination.

All contestants will be eligible to sail away with the grand prize—a glorious 7½ day cruise for two aboard the CPR's Princess Patricia along the spectacular inside passage of British Columbia and Alaska—the same route travelled by Captain Cook 200 years ago.

Three Remain in Poll For Top Male Athlete

It will be two former winners and a newcomer in the final three nominees for Victoria's male athlete of the year to be honored at the Sports Council of Greater Victoria 11th annual Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel, March 13.

Softball and basketball star Bob Burrows, who won the award in 1975, and world class gymnast Philip Delesalle, who captured the honor last year, are the returnees up for consideration while golfer Jim Rutledge who dominated the junior division last year and also performed well against senior competition, is the new name on the list.

Burrows had great success with Bate softball team which won its third straight Canadian championship last fall. He was named the tournament most valuable player, batted .462 and hammered four home runs in the championship. In addition, he has been a standout with Data-Tech and Scorpions senior "A" men's basketball clubs.

Delesalle is Canada' ranking gymnast, placed eighth in the World Cup meet in Oveida, Spain where he was fourth on the paralell bars and high bar; placed sixth of 14 competitors at the America's Cup meet in New York; was 15th of 56 entrants in the Moscow News event; was fifth all-round in the Riga Invitational; and won five of six gold medals in winning the Canadian championship.

Rutledge enjoyed his finest year. He won the city junior golf championship, the B.C. junior, the Canadian junior, the Vancouver Island Open and the Mount Brenton junior. He was ninth in the B.C. Amateur, sixth in the Metro Toyota Open against many professionals and second to Lanny Sawchuk in the Uplands junior.

Nominees for the female athlete of the year and team of the year will be announced later.

Guest speakers named to date include Dick Vertlieb, executive director of the Seattle Mariners; John Best, general manager of the Vancouver Whitecaps; wrestler Gene Kiniski and B.C. Lions' quarterback Jerry Tagge.

EIGHT-ENDER IN BONSPIEL

It's the year of the eight-enders for ladies at Victoria Curling Club.

Shirley Hopps of Playland became the third skip to enjoy that honor Monday in one of the opening round games of the annual interclub bonspiel.

Hopps, with Helen Rogers at third, Joan Eastwood at second and Pat Harvey at lead, scored her eight on the seventh end of an eight-end game against the Jane Schmidt rink of Oak Bay.

Previously this season, eight enders were registered by Victoria Curling Club members, Judy Christenson and Jean Chandler.

Vincent Leads Scoring Race

A forward who left Victoria and one ticketed to play there next year are running 1-2 atop the B.C. Junior Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Ron Vincent, who played his minor hockey in Saanich and now with Penticton, is the individual leader with 59 goals, 79 assists and 138 points. Vincent played briefly with Portland Winter Hawks of the Western Canada League last season.

His closest pursurer is 16-year-old Barry Pederson of Nanaimo Clippers, a centre who is expected to graduate to the WCHL Victoria Cougars next season. Pederson has 37 goals and a league high of 86 assists for 123 points.

British Journalists Charge Propaganda

LONDON (AFP) — Britain's National Union of Journalists have accused the military regime in Argentina of preparing a propaganda campaign for the World Cup soccer finals there this summer, similar to the one for the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

Denis Macshane, vice-president of the union, said: "Argentina now ranks with Chile and Cambodia as a country with one of the worst records for repressing journalists and destroying press freedom."

He said he hoped that many non-sports journalists would be sent to Argentina for the World Cup there in June "so that coverage extends beyond the football stadium.

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers have announced that Gerry Pinder, 29, a veteran of nine major league seasons, has started a 10-game trial with the World Hockey Association team.

Bizarre Battle Goes to Knicks

By the Canadian Press

Willis Reed shook his head, happy it was all over.

"It was a crazy game," said the rookie coach of New York Knicks. "Strange . . . you can't even begin to analyse it. It was weird."

It was, indeed. The Knicks outscored Seattle 61-60 in each half to beat the Super-Sonics 122-120 Tuesday night, but that even pace does not reflect the hectic nature of this contest, one which was bizarre even by National Basketball Association standards.

The Knicks jumped in front by 13 points midway through the second quarter, fell behind by 19 early in the final period and stormed ahead to lead by six with 22 seconds to go. However, they almost blew it as Seattle scored twice within the final eight seconds and then regained possession with three seconds left before a lob pass by John Johnson went awry.

In other games, Portland Trail Blazers downed San Antonio Spurs 118-144 in overtime, Los Angeles Lakers nipped Chicago Bulls 106-104, Phoenix Suns beat Buffalo Braves 114-111, Philadelphia '76ers dumped Cleveland Cavaliers 127-114 and Houston Rockets whipped Boston Celtics 111-96.

New York's starting front line of Bob McAdoo, Spencer Haywood and Lonnie Shelton combined for 33 points as the Knicks jumped in front 49-36.

It was 59-48 with 2:38 to go in the first half before Seattle, led by guards Gus Williams, with 24 points, and Dennis Johnson, with 21, seemingly took command—outscoring New York 21-4 over the next 5½ minutes.

Seattle outpointed New York 37-19 in the third period and when Jack Sikma hit the opening basket of the fourth quarter for the Sonics, they led by 19.

Then, just as suddenly as they had lost control, the Knicks regained command. Veterans McAdoo and Butch Beard teamed with rookies Ray Williams, Glen Gondrezick and Toby Knight to dazzle the Sonics with full-court defensive pressure, a blistering running attack and end-to-end hustle, helping New York to 42 points in the fourth quarter—its highest scoring quarter of the season.

Williams, after three miserable periods, scored 12 of his 16 points in the final 12 minutes and was ballhawking all over the court. McAdoo added 10 of his game-high 37 points in the comeback and controlled the boards with Knight, each grabbing five rebounds. Beard, who tied his season high with 20 points, had 10 in the fourth quarter. Gondrezick scored all eight of his points in the final period.

"It shows that in the NBA you're never really out of it," said Reed. "Our kids did a terrific job of putting extra pressure on them. It was the combination of a lot of hustle on our part and Seattle just blew cold."

Eight Chase Four Berths

It's playoff time in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Esquimalt meets Claremont on Thursday with Parkland to meet the winner Friday as eight area clubs begin the fight for four places in the Island championship at Nanaimo, March 2-4.

Spectrum meets Mount Douglas in another game Friday. On Saturday, Friday's losers clash for fifth and sixth places in the tournament. The Friday winners also meet Saturday while the divisional champions, Oak Bay and Belmont, who are already assured of a trip to the finals, complete the three-game card at Mt. Doug.

In league action Tuesday, Esquimalt upset Parkland 66-63 and Spectrum downed Claremont 65-40. Bill Barber scored 37 points for Esquimalt and Greg Webber had 16. Quinn Groenhyde scored 30 points for Parkland. Dave Shokar scored 25 points for Spectrum, Tim Achtzner had 18, while Frank Mikkers and Tom Kostek each had 12.

Super Leaguers in Showdown

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

The Association of Competetive Curlers, in other words, The Super League, will hold its championship bonspiel at the Racquet Club this weekend, Saturday and Sunday, and that will just about wrap up the serious competition hereabouts for the curling fraternity.

That's excluding the Brier, of course, which will command the attention of all curlers and most sporting fans when it is held at the Vancouver Pacific Coliseum, March 5-11.

With Bernie Sparkes and his rink of Ron Thompson, Al Cook and Kelven Bauer representing B.C., it gives the province an excellent chance for the title. Sparkes is definitely the most experienced of all the finalists, this being his ninth appearance in the final and third as a skip.

It had been hoped that Sparkes might compete in the Super League final, but he officially declined earlier this week. However, the event won't lack for class. Roy Vinthers, who almost won the Brier last year as the B.C. rep, will be here and so will Jim Armstrong, the former Victorian. Others who have signified their intentions are Guy Lizzee, Jerry Martin, Brent Giles, Glen Hilson, the Vancouver Super-League leader; plus most of the Island Super League teams, champion Brad Clarke, Totem winner Steve Skillings; Consols Rep and B.C. Mixed finalist Tim Horrigan; Don Matheson, Ted Jurista and perhaps Bob Hawkes, who is busily defending his B.C. police championship this week at Cranbrook.

Incidentally, Barry Smith, who skipped his mixed rink to the B.C. championship in Nelson last Sunday, is the same Barry Smith who played third for Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna in that B.C. final series against Sparkes. So maybe there is some justice after all.

An interested spectator at the Consols in Vanaouver was Wayne Statton who otherwise will be recalled as having won last year's men's anniversary bonspiel at Victoria Club.

This week, its the ladies' turn to turn "25" at VCC and they've got smme history going for them too.

Flora Martin and her foursome of Edna Messum, Doreen Baker and Betty Stubbs are obviously the most famous, having captured two successive Canadian senior women's championships in 1974 and 1975. In those same years Martin skipped rinks in the B.C. Lassie with Elsie Humphrey, Doreen Baker and Ruby Niemeyer in 1974 and Humphrey, Nita Moody and Marie Swanton in '75.

In earlier times, Martin skipped Beth Sealey, Edythe Pick and Bess Day (1960) and Pick, Helen Edwards and Marion Smith in 1962 to the B.C. finals.

The 1962 B.C. girls' championship rink consisted of Judy Leibel, Marie Leibel, Ellen Dennison and Joan Dunn of VCC. Verle McKeown with Messum, Baker and Joy Parsons, was runner-up in the 1977 provincial ladies' senior event while, of the younger crowd, Lea Corke and Fran Schauerte, although only 20 years of age, already have twice been to the B.C. mixed final as members of the Gord Carmichael rink.

They all belong and, as always, the annual "Daffodil" promises to provide a funfilled week for those who can stand the pace.

The "Gong-Show" will live on its own merits and probably live on in infamy too.

Happy 25th!

STRICTLY FOR THE BIRDS is the many-times-daily feeding ritual at Harrison yacht pond on Dallas Road, a favorite convention centre for ducks and seagulls. Bread is the usual fare, but the trick is to share it out fairly between scores of hungry bills and beaks. Bearded dispenser, right, seems to be following the adage that half a loaf is better than none. (Irving Strickland photo).

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A preliminary hearing into charges surrounding an abduction-robbery in which $19,000 was taken from the destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova opened Tuesday in Victoria provincial court before Judge William Ostler.

Two brothers, 44-year-old Frank Irving Fredricks and 48-year-old Lloyd Charles Fredricks, face a total of five charges. They are charged with breaking and entering 719 Connaught, unlawfully confining Peter and Candice Marie McIntyre, kidnapping Peter McIntyre, armed robbery of Peter McIntyre, and possession of stolen property, $19,000 in cash.

The brothers have elected trial by judge and jury.

A 23-year-old man charged with a break-in last Friday at the Alberta Meat Market, 1811 Cook, was denied bail by Judge Fred Giles.

Roy Thomas Gunderson's application for judicial interim release, made by lawyer David Wilson, was turned down and a preliminary hearing date of March 22 was set. Wilson elected trial by judge and jury and was granted a no-publication order on the bail hearing.

Also denied bail was 19-year-old Rick James Kurahara, 959 Balmoral.

Kurahara was charged with a break-in last Friday at Budget Rent-A-Car, 1800 Douglas, and possession of stolen keys and cash.

Kurahara was one of two survivors of a Feb. 7 mishap in which a car plunged off the end of a wharf at Port Renfrew, killing two persons.

He was remanded until today for election of his trial method.

A 26-year-old man was remanded until today on charges of pointing a firearm, unlawfully being in a dwelling house and possession of a dangerous weapon.

James Walter Sherrin, 3225 Eldon Place, was charged in connection with a Feb. 11 incident at the apartment building where he lived.

Giles granted Crown counsel Don Laughton's application for a one-day remand so that he could look into the Crown's position on bail.

Thomas Rudolf Boge, 18, was given a three-month, consecutive sentence for a Jan. 6 escape from Jordan River prison camp.

Boge pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large and a charge of escaping lawful custody was stayed by Laughton.

Laughton told the court Boge was sentenced to 30 days Nov. 28 for breach of probation and then received a six-month sentence Dec. 15 for possession of stolen property and was due for an April 17 release when he took off from the camp.

Defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming said Boge ran away because other prisoners were "shanking and piping" him — threatening him with knives and iron bars — because they thought he was "ratting" on them. Mah Ming said his client feared for his life and asked for a concurrent sentence, which would not have added any more time to the sentence Boge is serving.

But the judge turned down the application and ordered a consecutive sentence.

Giles sentenced 66-year-old Elmer Sebastian Joe, 7691 Central Saanich, to 14 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Joe acknowledged that it was his second conviction for a drinking-driving offence and asked for a jail term because a fine would be too much of a burden on the retired man and his family. Joe was fined $200 for impaired driving in 1976 and court was told the readings on the latest charge were .25 and .23.

Fined $200 for drinking-driving was Carl Mortensen, 57, of 2647 Blanshard.

A 17-year-old was released on his own recognizance after being charged with breaking and entering but Judge Fred Green imposed a curfew of 9 p.m. nightly except Saturday when the youth is allowed out until midnight.

Lloyd David Williamson, 100 Niagara, was charged with an early-morning break-in Monday at Ensign Chrysler Plymouth, 1061 Yates.

He was remanded until next Tuesday for election of trial method.

Fined after pleading guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol contents over .08 were: Edward Zendel, 37, of 540 Goldstream, $350; and Fredrick Arthur Smith, 58, of 920 Pandora, $200.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

Many situations arise during the course of an evening's play where virtually any bridge player, by employing normal imagination, can transform impending defeat into victory. Unfortunately, either inertia or laziness usually deprives him of the triumph that could be his, for he tends to play mechanically, without the application of judgment and/or imagination. Today's deal is a case in point.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♡ Q J 8
◇ A Q J 9 8 3

WEST	EAST
♠ J	♠ A Q 10 9 7
♡ 6 5	♡ K 10 2
◇ 7 5 4	◇ 6 2
♣ K 10 9 7 4 3 2	♣ Q J 5

SOUTH
♠ 6 5 4 2
♡ A 9 7 4 3
◇ K 10
♣ A 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

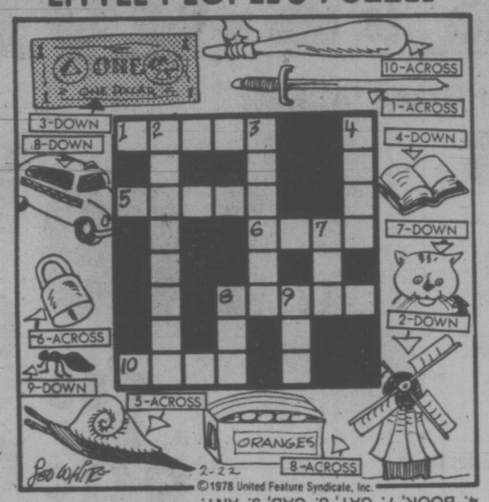

On West's opening lead of the spade jack, the three was played from dummy and East signalled for a continuation by playing the ten. At trick two West shifted to a club, South's ace capturing the trick.

Declarer now ruffed his remaining club, after which he led the queen of trumps. When East played low, so did declarer. The jack of trumps was led next, East covering with the king, South's ace winning. A third trump lead was taken by East's ten. From here in, all the defenders could make was East's ace of spades, since dummy's diamonds enabled South to discard his losing spades. East committed a serious error when he allowed West's jack of spades to capture the opening lead. East should have realized that West had either a singleton or doubleton spade, for if West had possessed the J-x-x or J-x-x-x of spades, he would have led his lowest spade. Hence declarer had to have started with either three or four spades.

Thus East should have overtaken the jack with the queen, after which the spade ace would be cashed, West discarding a club. A third spade lead would now be trumped by West. The contract would then have been defeated, since East had a sure trump trick.

It should be noted that declarer made a logical play when he declined to put up dummy's king on West's lead of the spade jack. Had he played the king, East's ace would have won the trick, and the defenders would then have made three spade tricks.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, February 23
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek harmony, especially within family circle. Make intelligent concessions. Maintain moderate pace. Review recent resolutions, especially those concerning work, recreation and nutrition. Taurus, Libra figure in your personal scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could fall madly in love. Key is to maintain balance, to provide logic with breathing space. Be enthusiastic, not fanatic. If single, express without final commitment. If married, don't wander to hamburger stand when a fine steak awaits at home base. You'll comprehend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Past efforts pay off — you are rewarded by a word, a deed in your behalf, a gesture, a caress. Be grateful. If you expect a flourish, a brass band, you are going to be disappointed. Money picture is brighter. One who seemed distant is close and proves it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with kind words from relatives. Deeds will follow. Be versatile, but don't scatter forces. Ideas, opportunities are plentiful. Key is to be selective. Laugh at your own foibles. This can gain allies and help in fulfilling aspirations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New approach brings profits. Act in independent manner — lead rather than follow. Another Leo and an Aquarian figure prominently. One you meet now could play important role in your life. You gain something which had been missing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cycle is such that you discern truth, persuade others to your point of view, create aura of confidence. Cancer, Aquarius individuals figure prominently — and so does the number 11. Take lead, dare to believe, assert opinions, declare yourself. You'll win!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What has been a source of concern can become pleasure, opportunity. Reach beyond what appears to be a limitation. Closed-door session actually opens area leading to advancement. Stress creativity, bury fear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good lunar aspect coincides now with friendship, relationship that is "serious." Give full play to creative resources. Realize that many of your hopes, wishes will be realized. Refuse to be discouraged by one who lacks imagination — and faith.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight change, travel consideration, writing. You do have ability to express in dynamic manner. Know it — and do something about it. You gain access to information previously considered confidential, restricted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar aspect coincides with future plans involving travel, vacation, education. Get together with family member — decide on budget, agree on ultimate goals. If compassionate, diplomatic, you pave path for happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Find out why "certain elements" have attempted to create an aura of confusion. See places, situations, people as the actually exist. Avoid wishful thinking, steer away from self-deception. Money and legal maneuvers are spotlighted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on settlements, decisions, relationship that is intensified. Circumstances tend to dictate actions. Older individual will lend benefit of experience. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. Spotlight on publicity; meeting those who hold opposing views — and marital status.

IF FEBRUARY 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are sensitive, psychic, analytical. You are never satisfied to know merely that something occurred — you want to know why it happened. Significant changes occur this year — March and December will be outstanding months for you in 1978. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. If single, this could be a marriage year for you.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. Hunter

We have 3688 for the game today. Two 8's, one 3, and one 6. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example, 38+8—6 is a solution for 40.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 100, with 68 a special challenge. I shall be glad to check solutions.

Family Month In May

British Columbia will have its second annual Family Month in May.

Provincial Family Month chairman Ed Taylor of Kelowna says Fort St. John, Smithers, Trail, West Vancouver and other communities have already signified their interest in the campaign to promote family-oriented activities.

The Provincial Family Health Committee is an arm of the B.C. Council for the Family.

Last May, many communities held family fun days featuring such events as picnics, scrub baseball, potato sack races and other games in which all age groups could take part.

"We hope that, through an emphasis on closeness and co-operation during Family Month, that a spin-off effect will see the same attitudes and actions carried on throughout the year," Taylor said.

Information is available from Family Month, 985 Belgo Road, Kelowna.

OTTAWA LED PARADE OF HIGHER JAN. PRICES

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices increased faster during January in Ottawa than in 13 other major cities, rising by seven-tenths of one per cent, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

In the 12-month period ending January, prices in Ottawa rose by nine per cent.

Nationally, the rate of price increases for January was four-tenths of one per cent, with the 12-month rate also at nine per cent.

Montreal fared best among the cities surveyed, showing no over-all increase in prices during the month. Costs of housing, health care and transportation rose but food and clothing prices fell. For the 12-month period, however, Montreal experienced an 8.7-per-cent increase.

January price increases in the other 12 cities, with their 12-month rates in brackets, were:

Toronto, up six-tenths of one per cent (up 9.2 per cent); Edmonton, 0.5 per cent (10.1 per cent); Vancouver, 0.5 per cent (7.5); Quebec City, 0.4 per cent (8.5 per cent); Thunder Bay, Ont., 0.4 per cent (10.1);

Saskatoon, 0.4 per cent (9.8); Regina, 0.4 per cent (10.5); Winnipeg, 0.3 per cent (8.7); St. John's, 0.3 per cent (7.8); Calgary, 0.2 per cent (8.3) and Halifax, 0.1 per cent (8.9)

Islanders Resisting 'Stepping Stone' Role

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Residents of Lasqueti Island, a normally tranquil retreat in Georgia Strait just northeast of Parksville, are beginning to make noise.

Since late last year they have been meeting, talking and asking a lot of questions about a B.C. Hydro proposal which could see their island used as a stepping stone for a transmission line between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

"We are going to continue to cause trouble, mostly in the form of asking a lot of questions," island resident Kevin Monahan said in an interview.

"We will continue until we feel we're satisfied."

Right now the 250 residents of the island feel there are too many unanswered questions about the $350-million project to provide twin 500-kilovolt (kv) transmission lines between Squamish on the mainland and a substation near Qualicum Beach on Vancouver Island.

They are concerned about the possible effects of a 660-foot-wide transmission line right of way across their homes, gardens, farms, fields and forests.

They want to know why Hydro can't just splice the line around Lasqueti, a proposal the islanders say wouldn't cost any more.

They want to know what the effects will be on their surface water supply if Hydro continues its present practice of spraying herbicides in order to keep rights of way clear.

And there are the more general questions that other environmental groups and opposition political parties are asking.

For example, does Vancouver Island really need the extra power that will be provided and are there sufficient controls on Hydro's development plans?

Opponents of the project have called for a two-year moratorium until unanswered questions are dealt with and other alternatives are studied.

Meanwhile, Hydro presses on, resolved that the line must go in.

The Crown corporation has had and will continue to have public meetings on the proposal but its position is that alternatives for providing extra power to the Island have been studied and the proposed line is the most economic and secure way of providing what's needed.

Hydro's engineers and planners don't feel that an alternative can be found and put in place in time to deal with forecasted load growth.

"It's our responsiblity to have the power there when people need it," said one Hydro spokesman.

Hydro commissioned Beak Consultants Ltd. of Vancouver to conduct an investigative study of the proposed route. The first report was released last October and the second volume, dealing with the underwater sections of the line from the Sunshine Coast to Dunsmuir substation on Vancouver Island near Qualicum Beach, is expected this summer.

The first volume said the demand for electrical power on the Island has almost doubled in the last 10 years.

The peak load now is about 1,000 megawatts and the forecast is for that demand to rise to 1,535 by 1983 when the first circuit is scheduled to be completed, to 1,720 by 1986-87 when the second circuit is to be operating and to 2,260 by 1,990-91.

Opponents say when the two 500 Kv circuits are completed in 1986 they will provide 2,200 million watts, raising Vancouver Island's peak load capability to 3,825 million watts, about four times the present peak load.

This is far in excess of Hydro's own forecast of power requirements, the opponents say.

But Hydro spokesman Dave Robertson says just because the line is capable of handling so many million watts doesn't mean that much power will be there all the time.

"There won't be kilovolts dancing around unused," he said, adding that the power just won't be generated at source if it is not needed. But the capability is there for handling future development on the Island.

He said the circuit completion dates are still 1983 for the first circuit and 1986 for the second. But these could be altered, he said, if there are dramatic changes in the load requirements or other problems arise.

Land clearing on the route from Squamish to Nelson Island, about 20 miles northwest of Sechelt on the mainland, will begin toward the end of this year and will have to be completed by October, 1980.

In the meantime, Hydro is waiting for Beak's second report which will deal with the underwater portion of the route.

Other 500kv underground cables have been installed elsewhere and are operating successfully but Hydro's would be the first to go underwater.

Beak said in the first report that the reason a second study is necessary is because more data and oceanographic studies are required on the underwater route.

"There is uncertainty about the technical feasibility of some of the submarine corridor sections."

The submarine portion would be made up of seven cables - six in service and one spare - which will be filled with oil under pressure.

The report did recommend a preferred corridor between the Cheekeye substation near Squamish and the Sunshine Coast, saying it will have less impact than the others on settled areas of the coast highway.

Environmentalists told Hydro officials during a recent meeting at Pender Harbor that they are opposed to the route because it will mar approaches to recreational areas, pass through the Sunshine Coast's major domestic watershed as well as a number of small parks and conflict with private land uses.

Robertson said Hydro will make the decision on the route for the line as soon as it feels sufficient information has been gathered. The objective will be to put the line where it will have the least impact, he said.

"We are not going to be able to please everybody."

Monahan says there is no justification for the line based on the development forecasts for the Island. he says Hydro doesn't foresee any large-scale industrial growth for the area.

Some speculate that Hydro is planning a large-coal generating plant or even a nuclear station on the Island and will need the line to ship the power back to the mainland.

"We just want to know what is going on," Monahan says.

Whether Lasqueti will be on the route eventually chosen for the line won't be known until after the second Beak report comes out but Monahan says Hydro's basic emphasis is on the island.

The corporation always says it is studying other alternatives, Monahan said, but the islanders feel this is only to keep the critics from the door.

The Lasqueti people are concerned about what effect land clearing will have on their water supply which is all surface water. They are also worried about herbicides being used as defoliants and getting into the water.

"We want to be guaranteed that it is not harmful," he said, adding that the residents want to be told that if it is harmful, Hydro will monitor the water supply.

"Hydro does have a moral responsibility to see that its actions do not cause harm."

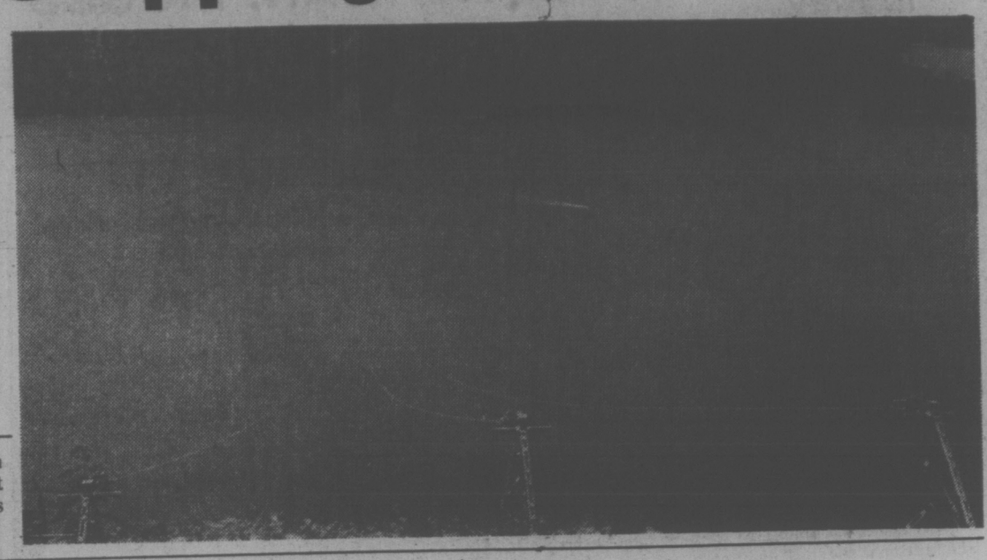

Some question the health hazards of 500 kilovolt lines. Robertson says Hydro stays on top of any research in this area but is not conducting any of its own. Ontario Hydro, along with the University of Toronto, has launched a study of the potential health hazards to those close to such high-voltage lines and the study is supposed to be released next month.

Don Lockstead, the NDP MLA for MacKenzie, which includes much of the mainland portion of the proposed route also supports a two-year moratorium on the line.

He said Hydro has not discounted a report that Beak's total ground survey of the route area amounted to 10 hours of helicopter time.

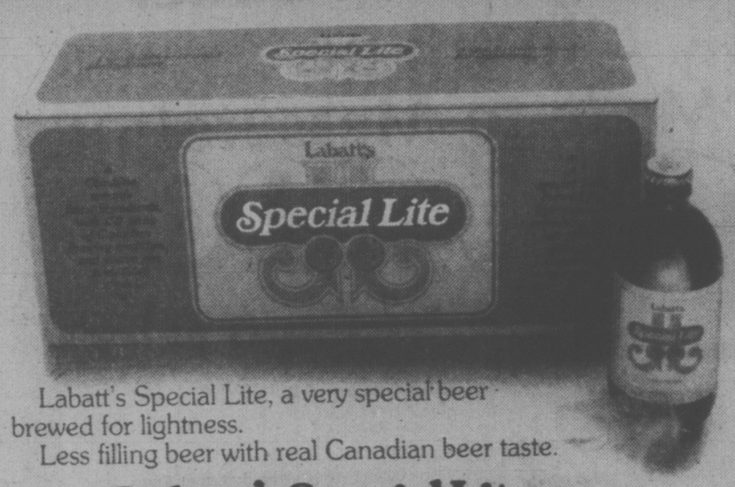

He also said Hydro is not able to say where the increased growth is going to come on the Island in order to justify putting in such a line.

The MLA says he has "a faint hope" that Hydro will reconsider its plans.

HYDRO'S proposal for an aerial crossing of Sechelt Inlet on the mainland is also causing concern.

The Litton/Moffat "Vari-Cook Control" Micro-Wave

Slow-Cooked Goodness at Microwave Speed

Like most products, some Microwave ovens are better than others. Until recently most of them cooked at just one, or two speeds. So foods like tougher cuts of meat that need longer roasting to be tender, were a failure. Then Litton/Moffat introduced the "Vari-Cook" control. Vari-cook is like the temperature control on your oven. You can set it just where you like. To simmer, roast, reheat, defrost — or just keep something warm. So now you can simmer a stew, or gently cook a custard. Sear a roast or scramble an egg. All the real cooking the early ovens couldn't manage. The new Litton/Moffat "Vari-Cook" really does "Bring back old-fashioned slow-cooked goodness — at microwave speeds."

- Vari-Cook* even control
- 45 minute rotary timer
- Easy-clean acrylic interior with sealed-in shelf

War on Child Porn Alone Assailed by Senior Police

OTTAWA (CP) — Singling out child pornography for a crack-down by law-enforcement agencies would amount to "supporting organized crime to the fullest," says Supt. Thomas Herdman of the Vancouver police department.

"God, it would open up everything else" in the field of pornography, he said with emotion in testifying Tuesday before a Commons committee studying 10 anti-pornography bills put forward by individual MPs.

"If that is what we want, then go ahead," he said, adding: "I'm sorry if I am too frank."

Herdman was being questioned by James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) who earlier had said the pledge by Justice Minister Ron Basford to crack down with new laws against so-called kiddie-porn would divert attention from other forms of pornography.

Herdman, along with representatives of the Toronto and Montreal police forces, said they want legislators to provide them with guides in the form of new legislation defining what obsenity is.

The child-pornography issue "is a red herring" in this debate, said Sgt. Mike Jennings on the Metropolitan Toronto police force. The majority of people in Canada "do not know what hard-core pornography is—they don't know the garbage that is out there."

Robert Jackson, program administrator of the policy analysis division of the British Columbia ministry of attorney-general, said New York was the birthplace of modern pornography and it is controlled there and in California by organized crime.

Almost all pornography in Canada is imported from the U.S. and 80 per cent of the business in North America is under control of the Mafia, he said.

Several police spokesmen discounted the theory of Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) that to broaden the law against pornography might threaten books in libraries and works of art.

In support of Leggatt, Roger Young (L—Niagara Falls) circulated a book The Amorous Illustrations of Thomas Rowlandson, and the police generally agreed with Young that it was a "200-year-old equivalent of Hustler Magazine." He said he got the book from the national library and it was in the Congressional Library in the U.S.

MAGAZINE IMPORTER DENIES CRIME LINKS

BURNABY (CP) — A Burnaby man denied Tuesday that his firm imports pornographic material supplied by United States organized crime.

Police made the charges before a Commons committee in Ottawa earlier Tuesday against Johnson and Franklin Wholesale Distributors Ltd., which distributes periodicals.

Anthony Perry, owner of the firm, said the testimony was hearsay.

"The only links we have are to our publishers," he said.

Perry said police always are welcome to check the magazines and other material in his warehouse—"we co-operate with the authorities."

Police have checked his material several times. In 1972, he pleaded guilty to possession of obscene books for distribution and was fined $3,500.

Perry maintained Tuesday, however, that he has no contacts with the U.S. underworld.

The three men who presented the Co-Ordinated Law Enforcement Unit brief to the Commons committee on justice and legal affairs said Perry's firm is the major distributor of salacious material in British Columbia, some of it involving children.

Most of it is obtained "through their organized crime contacts," the brief said.

Dixon Entrance Trade-off Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is prepared to abandon part of the rich fishery in the Dixon Entrance between British Columbia and the Alaskan Panhandle to get a boundary settlement with the United States, Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) charged Tuesday.

Leggatt said in the Commons that Canada is prepared to abandon its original position that its boundary line arising from the 200-mile limit should run southwestward from the seaward terminal of the so-called A-B line which separates B.C. and the Panhandle.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said the government is abandoning nothing in boundary negotiations with the Americans. The talks resumed Tuesday in Washington and there'll be another session in Ottawa in early March.

He said it would "not be appropriate or in th Canadian interest to discuss" the Canadian position in the talks in public.

A spokesman for Leggatt said later that the MP had learned that Canada had offered in effect to move the A-B line south about six miles before starting to draw the line in hopes of getting the U.S. to agree to more fishing for Canadians.

Leggatt riled Jamieson when he asked the minister whether any assessment had been prepared on what Canada would loose if forced to seek arbitration on the boundars dispute.

Jamieson said NDP MPs always assume Canada will loose in such situations and said "the fallback position of the Canadian government is very well protected in the event arbitration is necessary.

The 200-mile zones which Canada and the United States proclaimed last year overlap in three other places besides the Dixon Entrance.

REPAIR SUIT THREAT

MONTREAL (CP) — The Automobile Protection Association said Tuesday it will sue Chrysler Canada Ltd., unless 600 owners of recalled 1975-77 Volares and Aspens are reimbursed for repair costs.

President Phil Edmonston told a news conference that court action may be taken either by the Montreal-based association or by a new consumer group composed of the dissatisfied car owners.

Chrysler announced Monday it will soon issue recall notices to 180,000 Aspen and Volare models to correct a chronic stalling problem caused by a design defect in the carburetor.

However, the company said it will only reimburse owners for repairs connected with the deffects if the cars are taken to authorized dealers.

Aspens and Volares have been recalled twice before in the last year for defects in the steering and brakes, Edmonston said. "These problems have not even been solved by those recalls.

"Since then we've had still more complaints from these same drivers."

Economy No. 1-Rene

QUEBEC (CP)—Independence will take a back seat to the economy in the Quebec national assembly session which opened Tuesday, as the Parti Quebecois government grapples with record unemployment in Quebec.

Premier Rene Levesque told the opening session of the assembly he has "total confidence" in the future of Quebec but anxiety about the short-tterm economic outlook.

He mentioned that a law creating the framework for the promised referendum on independence will be passed "as soon as possible." However he added later it was not urgent.

The bulk of the premier's inaugural address to the assembly dealt with the economy, as he called on Quebecers to buy Quebec-made products and work harder. He also appealed to public-sector employees to moderate their wage demands.

Levesque acknowledged at a news conference that there was not much new in the legislative program he outlined for the new session, the third since his government came to power in November, 1976.

"But the problems aren't new," he said. Quebec has the necessary human and material resources for an efficient economy, but what was needed was "to mobilize those resources."

His government had allotted $330 million last year "creating jobs and helping than not disappear," $250 million of it in a program that runs until March, 1979, and it would accelerate these efforts.

Aid would be extended to ailing industries such as textile manufacturing, shoe and furniture makers, and the government would take steps to modernize the pulp-and-paper industry.

Steps would be taken to assist copper and zinc producers from the ravages of the world marketplace where these minerals are selling below what it costs tto produce them in Quebec.

The premier said he wanted to avoid the type of massive layoffs in Quebec mining towns that affected Sudbury, Ont., when Inco announced cutbacks at its nickel mine there.

Levesque expressed his disappointment with the federal-provincial economic conference last week in Ottawa, adding that he and the other provinces had hoped the federal government would have acted to get the economy moving.

He described the Federal government as an "undying inventor of bandaid programs," but he added that "as long as the present regime exists" Quebec will press Ottawa in fields where the federal government has control.

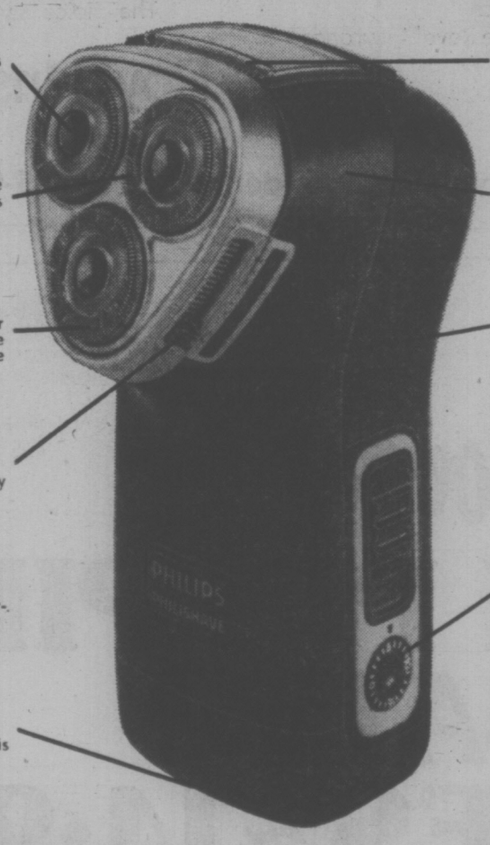

Levesque walked out of the federal-provincial meeting after accusing the federal government of depriving the province of $64 million in housing grants because of bureaucratic red tape.

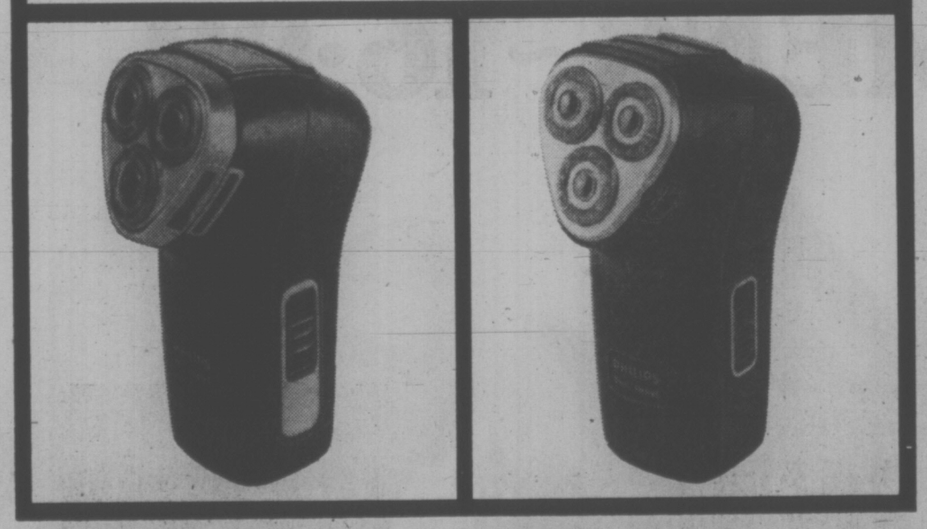

But he has not given up on the possibility that Quebec will be able to retrievs the money and spend it to revitalize the core of Quebec cities.

"The $64 million belongs to Quebec," he said.

The premier was also critical of some Quebec industries he said were "pampered" and uncompetitive, describing their attitude as "very dangerous."

Rail Pact Signed But Next Time. . .

MONTREAL (CP) — A tentative one-year contract for the country's 100,000 unionized rail workers was signed Tuesday, but union leaders were already eyeing the next negotiations in October when anti-inflation controls won't apply.

The agreement, initialled at a late-afternoon ceremony, provides a six-per-cent wage increase for 1978 that will boost average annual earnings in the rail industry by $930 to more than $16,500.

Labor Minister John Munro telephoned his congratulations to the parties on the successful conclusion of the country's largest single round of collective bargaining, which involved 17 unions and 11 companies including Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

However, union officials were only lukewarm in their assessment of the deal, the parameters of which were determined well in advance by the anti-inflation controls.

The agreement will be submitted next Tuesday to the general conference of the Associated Railway Unions (ARU) which must decide whether to send the agreement to the rank-and-file for ratification. While it could reject the pact and order new negotiations, most union negotiators aren't looking for that to happen.

ARU negotiator Ray Peer said the agreement will probably get the necessary approval from the conference and the members because it "gives them all that is possible under the existing law."

Several union negotiators said privately the gains that weren't made in 1978 will probably be added to demands for 1979 contract talks which begin in the fall.

Peer alluded to the tough negotiations which may lie ahead next winter when he told reporters militancy among his members will grow if the companies don't offer better contracts once controls go.

"The anti-inflation legislation made it a particularly difficult task, because the parties didn't have any room to maneouvre," Peer said.

The pact stresses measures to improve job-security in the industry and ease the impact of seasonal layoffs. Some of the features include:

—The right of unions to be consulted before work in the industry is given to outside firms;

—Better early-retirement benefits to workers over 55 who choose to leave rather than exercise their seniority during layoffs;

—Expansion of an inverse seniority system which encourages senior employees to accept temporary layoffs and receive up to 80 per cent of their salary through a combination of unemployment insurance benefits and payments from their railway's job-security plan;

—Improvements to pass privileges on passenger trains for employees of Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

CP Will Release Salaries

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific Ltd. has thrown in the towel in its fight to keep secret the salaries of the company's three top executives, a company spokesman confirmed Tuesday.

A company lawyer filed a motion earlier in the day in U.S. District Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., to withdraw the company from its lengthy fight with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

The lawyer, Lee Monroe, said in a telephone interview from Washington that the court should decide within a week or 10 days whether to accept the company's motion.

The court action was initiated by the Vancouver Sun under the U.S. Freedom of Information legislation. The Sun applied last spring for publication of salaries for 1974, 1975 and 1976, which SEC had previously allowed the company to keep secret.

Such information is normally available on all companies trading on U.S. stock exchanges.

Canadian Pacific, whose shares are traded on the New York Stock Exchange, had been seeking an exemption, arguing that this information would harm its competitive position and would aid advocates of nationalization of its railway division.

Rice said the company applied for exemption in 1977 but the SEC refused the request.

"The withdrawal, I guess, is acknowledgement of the SEC requirement even though the company doesn't agree with it," Rice said.

He said information on the salaries should be made public as soon as the SEC makes them available.

U.S.-owned companies must normally disclose executive salaries to their shareholders, but until the commission agreed last spring to the Sun's demands for disclosure of the Canadian Pacific salaries, the Montreal-based conglomerate was able to keep the information confidential.

Canadian Pacific immediately appealed the commission's ruling and, since June, the company and the commission have filed various briefs with the appeal court.

The SEC argued that the claims were based on political and social factors, not economic considerations and that the company failed to understand the intent and scope of the Freedom of Information legislation.

PWA Asks Charter Flights

OTTAWA (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines was the first air carrier to file application with the Canadian transport commission for permission to start operating domestic advanced booking charter (ABC) flights, the commission announced Tuesday.

But the commission said in a news release it will not start processing the Alberta government-owned airline's application until it files rates for the proposed new flights.

PWA wants to operate 18 round-trip ABC flights between Toronto and Vancouver from July 1 to Sept. 2. It also wants to operate 36 round-trip ABC flights between Edmonton and Vancouver, and another 36 between Vancouver and Calgary. These flights would operate between June 3 and Oct. 7.

Grits 'Gassing' All In Pipeline Bill-MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government wants to grab so much control over construction of a northern gas pipeline that civil rights of Canadians are jeopardized, Progressive Conservative MPs said Tuesday.

"The Bill of Rights is emasculated by this bill," Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said in the Commons during debate on legislation paving the way for construction of the multi-billion-dollar pipeline.

The bill should be called the Liberal gas bill because the Liberals are gassing native groups, corporations and provincial governments affected by the pipeline, Woolliams said. Ths federal government was seeking the power to impose unilaterally decisions on them.

Billing himself as a voice from Canada's oil capital, Woolliams said the cabinet will have absolute power over the proposed agency which will be established to monitor developments in construction.

The agency would only be allowed to question government decisions when a point of law would arise.

"But the illegal can be made legal," Woolliams said.

The government recently intrpduced legislation giving the RCMP powers to open private mail. The force has engaged in the practice for 40 years although it was illegal, he said.

Peter Bawden (PC—Calgary South), who said he has worked in the oil industry for 25 years, said that it is clear "Ottawa will control every minute detail of the pipeline."

He accused the Liberals of bowing to New Democratic pressure for even greater government control of the project.

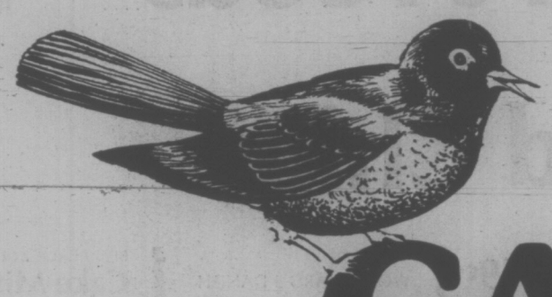

Teachers Made Bombs?

QUEBEC (CP) — Six chemistry teachers at a junior college here were charged Tuesday with violations of the provincial Explosives Act for allegedly making bombs during class.

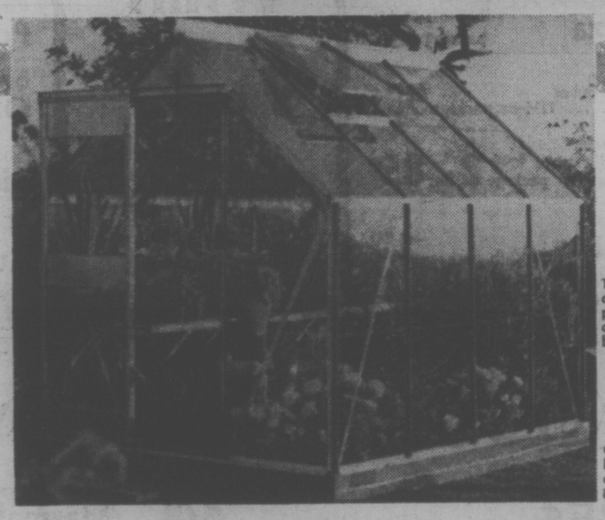

They were charged with possession of explosives without having a government permit and are liable to fines of netween $50 and $1,000.

The bomb-making experiments were part of a 10-day course on the preparation of explosives given by the professors. The course was called le Commando du Pif (The Poof Commando).

The professors described the experiments as harmless and said they were designed to raise interest in chemistry among 17- and 18-year-old students.

Tiny's Special Brand of Thick-Cut Marmalade

tiny bennett

The Seville oranges are arrivingin the stores now, so I'm going to be busy making my own special brand of thick cut marmalade — a full year's supply.

Last year I was ill when the oranges arrived so I didn't make any marmalade. All year I've had to buy it and hear my wife wailing that the imported stuff is not as good as mine; expensive, too at 98 cents for a 12 ounce jar.

The Seville orange is incredibly bitter, thick-skinned and full of pits, but it is unique in the making of the British-style marmalade that is richly thick and filled with succulent peel.

Happily, it is also a rule-of-thumb recipe, one of the few I can carry in my head, and spout on demand. So once you have the basics, you can make it up at any time and in any amount that is convenient.

Here's my recipe for a resonable sized batch:

TINY'S SPECIAL BRITISH MARMALADE

We need six Seville oranges, two medium sweet oranges, one medium grapefruit and two large lemons, or any sized batch of fruit that has that kind of mixture.

Using a razor-sharp knife and a wooden cutting board, cut the fruit in half from top to bottom, and then cut each half into thin slices, rejecting the pits but saving them and saving the juice of the fruit.

This is a most tedious job, as the pits slow one down, but do keep the slices really thin.

Put the sliced fruit and juices into a measure, keep count and for every cup of fruit and juice you put into a large soaking bowl, add 2¼ cups of cold water. And when all the fruit is sliced and the water added, cover the bowl and let soak for 24 hours.

This soaking is to assist in softening the peel, because unlike most preserves, the peel is the important edible part of this kind of marmalade.

The next step is to pour it all into a preserving pot, with the pits tied in a square of cheesecloth. Bring it to the boil and simmer uncovered for 1½ hours. Then allow to stand, covered, overnight.

Bring up to the simmer the next day still uncovered and get ready your jam jars and melted paraffin wax — I sterilize jars and lids in the dishwasher.

For the best effect one should cook small quantities at a time, an easy matter since the old rule of thumb calls for equal parts sugar with fruit pulp and juices. So put four cups sugar and four cups fruit, pulp and juices into a wide-mouthed saucepan, and boil on high heat to get a jell. (This is 220 on a jelly thermometer). Or put a dab on a saucer, pop into the freezer to chill and check if it has set.

I'm always a bit chicken about this, but add half a bottle of commercial pectin and give each batch a final five minute rousing boil.

Allow to cool for 10 minutes to allow the mix to thicken a little so the peel will spread evenly up and down the jar, and ladle the mix into the prepared jars to just past the glass shoulders, and pour into each a thin, covering film of melted paraffin wax.

Carry on with the rest of the marmalade, and when all is in jars and the paraffin wax set, add a second thin layer of wax to ensure a good seal.

When that is set, put the jars in a cool place to allow the marmalade to set — if it does.

At least once out of five times mine doesn't set, as determined by turning the jars over and back again, and on those occasions I heave a great sigh, carefully remove the wax plugs, reboil the contents, and finish off as before.

This is essential, for this marmalade must be solidly thick.

Now, let me reprise the basics of this recipe:

You put together a mix of mostly Seville oranges, very bitter, with the thin-skinned different flavor of a grapefruit, the sweet taste of a Florida orange with its tasty peel, and the zesty sparkle of the lemon with a juice that assists in making a set.

The soaking-softening mix is simply 2¼ c. of water to one c. fruit pulp, peel and juice.

The final stage of cooking is very British — one-to-one in sugar and fruit pulp.

If you don't like the bitter British marmalades, don't buy the Seville oranges. Alter my recipe by using sweet oranges instead, but still with a sweet grapefruit and those very important lemons.

FOOD & nutrition

Nothing Is Phoney About Mock Danish

½ cup butter
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 tbsp. water
½ cup butter
1 cup water
1 tsp. almond extract
1 cup all-purpose flour
3 eggs

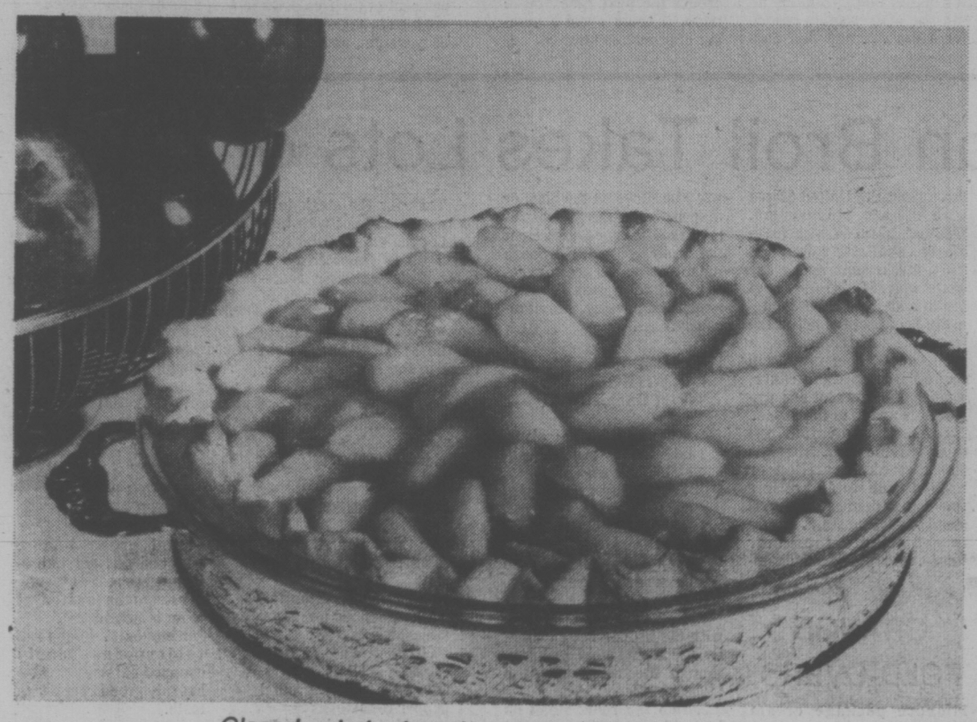

Glaze

2 tbsp. butter, softened
1½ cups sifted icing sugar
1½ tsp. vanilla
1 to 2 tbsp. warm water
Flaked almonds

In bowl, cut ½ cup butter into 1 cup flour; sprinkle mixture with 2 tbsp. water; combine. Bring mixture together to form a ball. On ungreased baking sheet, pat dough into 3-inch circles, using approx. 2 tsp. dough for each circle; set aside. In saucepan, bring ½ cup butter and 1 cup water to a rolling boil. Remove from heat; quickly stir in almond extract and 1 cup flour. Over low heat, beat mixture vigorously until it forms a ball (approx. 1 minute). Remove from heat; beat in eggs (all at once) until mixture is smooth and glossy. Spread mixture using 1½ tbsp. batter for each pastry circle, extending batter just beyond edge of pastry circle. Bake in 350°F oven for 30 minutes or until topping is crisp and golden.

Note — The topping will shrink and fall slightly when cooked. Cool slightly, then glaze. Sprinkle flaked almonds generously over top each pastry. To prepare glaze, combine 2 tbsp. butter, icing sugar, vanilla, and 1 to 2 tbsp. warm water, until mixute is smooth and a good speading consistency.

Glazed unbaked apple pie is a sure-fire winner

This Apple Pie's a Beauty

Mary Moore

If you can make beautiful glazed raw strawberries into pies, why not apples? You can and it is a beauty and has some easy steps.

You need a baked pastry shell. Some of the apples are not pared. The flavor is enriched as apple juice is used in the glaze.

UNBAKED APPLE PIE

1½ cups apple juice (divided — see below)
¾ cup sugar
About 6 or 7 cups red apples cut in wedges, some should be unpared (see below)
2 tbsp. cornstarch
1 tbsp. butter
½ tsp. vanilla
1 9" baked pastry shell.

NOTE: I have given you so many recipes for pastry you can choose whichever you like best and make a baked pastry shell.

When you prepare the apples pare about two-thirds of them. Leave remaining one-third unpared but make a small slit in skin of each piece at widest part to make cutting with fork at mealtime easier when cut into even wedges about one-quarter inch thick.

Into a large shallow pan measure only 1¼ cups apple juice and sugar and bring to boil. Reduce heat to medium. Add half of the apple wedges and simmer gently until a fork will penetrate but apples ARE NOT SOFT — about 3 minutes — stirred gently once or twice. Skim out onto large holding plate to cool. Repeat until all are done. The unpared wedges required simmering one minute longer.

Mix the cornstarch with the remaining one-quarter cup apple juice and stir into the remaining apple syrup until thick. Stir in butter and vanilla.

Arrange cooled, peeled apple wedges in baked shell in overlapping circles. Arrange unpeeled wedges in attractive ring at top centre. Pour warm syrup all over evenly. Cool. Serve with Cheddar cheese.

High Blood Pressure at All Ages

By Ruth Fremes and Zak Sabry

Have your child's blood pressure checked once a year? But that's only for adults!

That is the recommendation of Dr. Jennifer Loggie a professor of Pediatrics at the University of Cincinnati. Every child above the age of three should be checked at their once-yearly visit and an adolescent should be checked more often. These recommendations undoubtedly come as a surprise to most of you because it is generally believed that high blood pessure is a disease of adulthood. Many health scientists now realize that the roots are in childhood and can be detected then. This early warning system allows the institution of simple adjustments in living and eating patterns to check the development of any serious complications.

Researchers claim that 15% of children are fated to have high blood pressure, either as a result of genetic inheritance, diet, weight, living habits or stress factors.

Because it is detectable at childhood and because early recognition would lessen the debilitating effects of the disease, children should be tested and put on careful diets and exercise programs to correct the situation, if the child's blood pressure is elevated.

Blood pressure is measured as two numbers; one is the arterial pressure when the heart beats, called the systolic pressure; the other is the arterial pressure between the heart beats called the diastolic pressure. A reading of 120 systolic pressure over 70 diastolic pressure would be normal for an adult. For a 4 year old, however, that would be too high; a reading of 105 over 60 would be normal for a child that age.

Not everyone is susceptible to high blood pressure. For hereditary reasons, some of us will not have the problem but more are showing elevated blood pressure today because of environmental reasons, a riskier diet and a more relaxed life style.

Any child who has elevated blood pressure should have his diet modified so that he would be slender rather than chubby. His exercise program can be increased and the diet changed to include as little salt as possible.

However, how many children do you know have their blood pressure regularly? If you're like us, you know none.

Still, there are susceptible youngsters and they eat the same high fat, high salt diet that everyone else does. It would not be good for them.

eating right

Salt is difficult for people with hypertension to handle. Today's child has a diet that is often very high in salt.

It begins at birth. Cow's milk has three times the concentration of sodium as human milk. A baby consuming one litre of human milk would get 160 milligrams of sodium. The same amount of cow's milk would give 500 milligrams. Obviously, human babies don't need much sodium.

With this in mind, think about the added salt that goes onto baby's foods. Parents often add salt to food because they think the child needs it or that it will make the food taste better, but natural foods without added salt and a well balanced natural diet has plenty of sodium — enough for any adult or child.

As the young get older, their diets take on an even more salty flavour. A single commercial hamburger and serving of chips contains almost all of the sodium needed for a day . . . and that does not include the salt that is added or the pickles on the side. Just think — potato chips contain 300 times the amount of sodium in boiled potatoes.

Most commercial foods, soups, vegetable juices, convenience foods, snacks and prepared meats have added salt.

You can avoid the problem. Stop adding salt when cooking. Leave the salt shaker off the table. Explain to the family that they don't need added salt and that for some, it's downright dangerous.

There are also exercises that help lower blood pressure. Swimming, running, cycling and brisk walking appear to be particularly helpful.

So, raise your family on little or no salt and involve everyone in the right kind of exercise. Ask your doctor about those blood pessure checks the next time you're there. It could avoid a number of problems later on.

IS SUGAR PUTTING ON PRESSURE?

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — For those with a tendency toward high blood pressure, the sugar bowl may join the salt shaker as an unwelcome dinner guest, a researcher suggests.

The implication that sugar may be a partial cause of high blood pressure, or hypertension, was contained in a report on experimental diets fed monkeys by researchers at Louisiana State University (LSU).

Dr. Gerald Berenson told a science writers' forum that monkeys on a diet high in salt and sugar experienced a rise in blood pressure exceeding that of monkeys fed only a high-salt diet. Both diets raised blood pressure far higher than did a control diet with no added salt or sugar.

Though the cause of hypertension — which affects one in six adults and can lead to fatal heart and kidney disease — is in most cases unknown, high salt intake has for some time been considered a contributing factor.

Berenson told the forum, sponsored by the American Heart Association, that a high-sugar diet not only seems to increase the effect of salt on blood pressure, but also to increase cholesterol levels in the blood.

Though there can be no direct comparison of experimental results in animals with studies in humans, Berenson commented on the high salt and sugar intake of children in LSU's Bogalusa heart study. In that study, begun in 1972, more than 5,000 children are being regularly examined in an attempt to understand the early development of hypertension in coronary heart disease.

"We're beginning to detect hypertension in our school-aged children," he said. "We have spent a lot of time looking at the nutritional intake of the children, and I think there are some significant observations: One is that the children are consuming about 34 per cent of their calories in snack foods alone (which are high in sugar) and are eating a high-salt diet — by body weight, about 1½ times what adults are eating."

Chocolate Marble Cheesecake

1½ cups chocolate wafer crumbs
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup butter, softened
3 cups (24 ounces) cottage cheese
8 ounces cream cheese, softened
¼ cup butter, softened
1 cup sugar
½ cup sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 beaten egg yolks
4 stiffly beaten egg whites
4 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, melted

Combine crumbs, cinnamon and butter. Press into 9-inch springform pan. Chill thoroughly. Sieve cottage cheese until smooth. Blend in cream cheese and butter. Add sugar, flour and salt. Fold in egg yolks, then egg whites. Pour over crust. Add melted chocolate and swirl into filling with a fork, being careful not to disturb crust. Bake 1 hour at 325°F. Turn off heat and leave cheesecake in oven 1 hour more. Chill thoroughly and remove from pan. Decorate with chocolate curls, if desired. 8 to 10 servings.

A Good London Broil Takes Lots of Care

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times

As in any other metier, if the kitchen is your domain (both professionally and as a hobby), food associations occur as naturally as thought. In preparation for a column on cooking, we were wondering about the possible origins of the dish known as London Broil, which English sources assure us is of American inspiration, and then the speculation began. Perhaps there was a restaurant in some town or city called London; perhaps it was an English chef or cook who first threw a flank steak on the grill and served it with mushroom sauce.

In any event, it was generally ageed that a London Broil made with a flank steak of empeccable quality, seared and broiled quickly on both sides and served with a conscientiously made mushroom sauce, can, without qualification, be a fairly memorable dish. And both the steak and the sauce are child's play to prepare.

The sauce, of course, is just as important as the steak, and, when I recently made the dish, I decided on the mushroom sauce known in French as a sauce chausseur. It is not one of those thick, mucilaginous sauces made throughout the United States with canned mushrooms. This one is made with fresh butter, shallots, tomatoes, fresh mushrooms and a dry white wine. It also uses beef broth and if a good homemade beef broth is not in the freezer or refrigerator, a good canned beef broth will do. In the interest of texture, a touch of arrowroot or cornstarch is added to the sauce.

There is one important thing to remember. After the flank steak is grilled or broiled (the total broiling time is 10 minutes or less), it should be left to stand briefly to redistibute the inner juices. The steak should always be sliced on the bias, or diagonally, in the interest of texture. The procedure: Heat the broiler or grill, prepare the meat and the green vegetable, green beans with lemon and parsley, simultaneously.

LONDON BROIL WITH SAUCE CHASSEUR

1 two-pound flank steak
2 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley Sauce chasseur (see recipe).

1. Preheat a broiler rack with the broiler set on high. Or use a charcoal grill, although the warm-up time takes a while.
2. Rub the flank steak on both sides with oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Use a generous amount of pepper.
3. Place the meat on the broiler rack or on the hot grill and let it cook about four or five inches from the source of heat. Broil about three to five minutes and turn the meat. Broil on the other side three to five minutes. Cooking time will depend on the desired degree of doneness.
4. Transfer the steak to a hot platter and dot with butter. Let the steak stand in a warm place about five minutes. This will help redistribute the internal juices of the meat.
5. Juices will accumulate as the steak stands. Add these to the sauce chasseur. Sprinkle the meat with chopped parsley and carve it on the diagonal. Serve with the sauce.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUCE CHASSEUR

One-third pound mushrooms, sliced, about two cups
½ cup peeled, chopped fresh or canned tomatoes
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
One-third cup dry white wine
½ cup fresh or canned beef broth
½ teaspoon chopped fresh tarragon or half the amount dried
1 teaspoon arrowroot or cornstarch
2 teaspoons water.

1. Slice the mushrooms and chop the tomatoes and set aside in separate bowls.
2. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the mushrooms, shallots, salt and pepper to taste. Cook about 10 minutes.
3. Add the wine and simmer briefly over high heat. Add the tomatoes and beef broth and tarragon. Cook about five minutes, stirring occasionally.
4. Blend the arrowroot and water and stir this into the sauce. Cook briefly and serve.

Yield: 1½ to 2 cups.

STRING BEANS WITH LEMON

1 pound green beans, trimmed and cut into 2-inch cubes Salt to taste
2 tablespoons butter at room temperature
Juice of half a lemon
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Rinse the beans and drain them. Put them into a saucepan with water to cover and salt to taste.
2. Bring to the boil and simmer 10 minutes or until tender. The beans must remain a trifle firm or "al dente."
3. Drain the beans and return them to a hot saucepan. Add the butter and sprinkle with lemon juice, parsley and pepper. Toss. Serve hot.

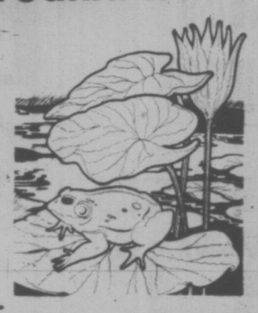

Yield: 4 servings.

ORANGE FOLD-OVERS

14-ounce package cream cheese
10 slices white bread
¼ cup orange marmalade

Mix cream cheese and marmalade in a bowl. Spread on 10 slices of bread and fold diagonally, sealing the edges. Place on a cookie sheet, brush with cream and sprinkle with coconut and sugar. Bake at 400°F for 10 minutes or until toasted. Serves four to six.

More Meal Brightness As Winter Winds Down

As we see the end of winter approaching, the need is felt for more brightness in meals, and more invigorating food. And certainly this is felt not only in larger families but as much when preparing meals for one person.

Perhaps the need is best met by including fresh vegetables and fruits more often — in two meals each day instead of in one. At the same time cut down on starchy foods in the white flour group, and in prepared packaged cereals; and on commercially prepared potatoes because of the high fat percentage (and the high cost).

Potatoes in themselves are a good source of vitamins and minerals, and thus provide energy with lasting quality.

A smooth potato soup enriched with eggs and skim milk, topped with finely chopped fresh green parsley, chives, kale or chickweed is a pleasure to remember. Little is lost in the cooking and extras are added by using stock from vegetables on a previous day.

For lunch or supper have a salad with fruit for the rest of the meal; using homemade plain yogurt as the additional milk content.

Creamy Potato Soup

1 Tbsp soft margarine
¼ cup chopped onion
1 Tbsp rice polishings
1 Tbsp soy flour
2 cups vegetable stock
1 cup diced potatoes
½ tsp salt
2 egg yolks
1 cup milk from skim powder
1 Tbsp brewer's yeast (torula)

Don't try using leftover cooked potatoes; the result will not have the fresh taste.

In saucepan heat margarine; cook onion few minutes until soft. Stir in rice polishings, salt and soy flour until smooth and bubbling, adding a portion of the vegetable stock if needed.

Meanwhile, quickly pare potato thinly, dice, and add with remainder of vegetable stock to the pan. Mix well with wooden spoon. Bring to gentle boil and simmer, covered for about 15 minutes, until potatoes are done.

Mash quickly through a wire sieve; return everything to saucepan with the cooking liquid.

Beat egg yolks in small bowl, adding the milk; then add this mixture to the heated soup, beating all together with the torula yeast added. Do not boil again after these last additions but keep hot. The egg yolks will be cooked by the hot food, but the yeast will not be spoiled in the few minutes it is in the pan.

Serve at once in warmed soup plates or bowls, sprinkled with finely chopped chives or parsley. Serves 2 or 3.

Almost any vegetable can be made into a soup. A combination of kinds is a good way to serve these essential foods to those who are not willing vegetable consumers.

Split green peas make a good foundation for most vegetable soups. They need no soaking. The cook in 25 minutes of boiling, and can then be finished with a few specials in an extra five or 10 minutes.

Onion, garlic and celery are fine flavor makers. And remember too that each adds its quota of natural salts, so be wary of adding too much extra table salt. Taste at end of cooking time; add a tiny bit more if necessary, and warn everyone that the soup is already salted so they will taste before pouring it on.

Split Pea Vegetable Soup

¼ cup green split peas
1 outside stalk celery
1 medium clove garlic
1 tsp chopped onion
3 cups boiling water or veg. stock
1 Tbsp soy flour
1 cup finely sliced green cabbage Or young kale leaves
1 cup grated carrot
2 canned tomatoes, cut up
1 Tbsp torula yeast
Paprika and curry powder

Into saucepan put split peas, celery, cut into pieces, whole garlic, onion and cover with boiling water. Stir in soy flour; bring to boil and simmer covered for about 25 minutes. Remove garlic if desired or mash with the other ingredients with a large fork to break up the split peas. Continue simmering.

Prepare cabbage (or kale leaves from garden), carrot and tomato, adding gradually to soup in saucepan so that simmering is maintained.

Replace lid and cook more rapidly for 10 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in torula yeast. Serve, with wholewheat bread and Cheddar cheese for a complete lunch. Serves 2 or 3.

Mushrooms, being a fungus food, contain valuable amounts of roboflavin, niacin, some thiamine, vitamin C and even a little protein. Not to be regarded as a complete food, they add their quota of nutrients to many dishes without a great load of calories. And their flavor when a fresh batch appears in local stores, is delicious.

Add mushrooms to a late winter soup of storage squash, brightened with finely cut chervil, parsley or American cress from the garden. If none of these green plants is available, use florets of broccoli, chopped spinach or even shredded green lettuce.

Winter Squash Soup

3 cups diced winter squash
1 whole garlic clove enough hot water to cover
¼ tsp salt
¼ cup mushrooms, fresh or frozen
2 or 3 cups vegetable stock
1 Tbsp wholewheat flour
choice of broccoli pieces, spinach or green lettuce

Cook squash pieces and garlic with enough water to barely cover, until tender but not mushy. Add salt sparingly.

Add mushrooms and cook five minutes gently.

Stir in vegetable stock liquid from another day. Mix flour with a little liquid, then stir into soup to thicken. Add chosen green vegetable, chopped small, and cook gently for five minutes longer.

Sprinkle with paprika and curry — just a tiny amount. Serve in warmed plates or bowls; sprinkle top of each with a tablespoon of grated Cheddar cheese. Serves 2 or 3 as a meal with homemade Brown Rice Bread or Rye Bread.

These homemade soups can have a new ingredient each day so that they never become monotonous. The vegetables are freshly cooked each day, though a spoonful of leftovers is useful for color contrast.

The one-dish meal concentrates the work on one project. Keep a small variety of available vegetables on hand to make each day a nutritious soup that tastes and looks different.

Madras Curried Eggs

¼ cup butter
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
2 tsp. to 1½ tbsp. curry powder (use amount according to personal preference)
2 tsp. tomato paste
¾ cup water
salt and pepper (to taste)
1 tsp. lemon juice
6 hard cooked eggs, shelled; halved lengthwise hot cooked rice
condiments

In skillet, melt butter; saute onion, garlic, and green pepper until onion is tender but not browned. Add curry powder, tomato paste, and water. Simmer for approx. 10 minutes. Season with salt and pepper, to taste. Stir in lemon juice. Add halved eggs to curry sauce; gently heat eggs through. Serve Madras Curried Eggs over hot cooked rice. Makes 3 to 4 servings. Serve with condiments such as chopped onion, chopped green onion, chopped tomato, chopped parsley, chopped peanuts, raisins, chutney or shredded cheddar cheese.

ROCKET BURGERS

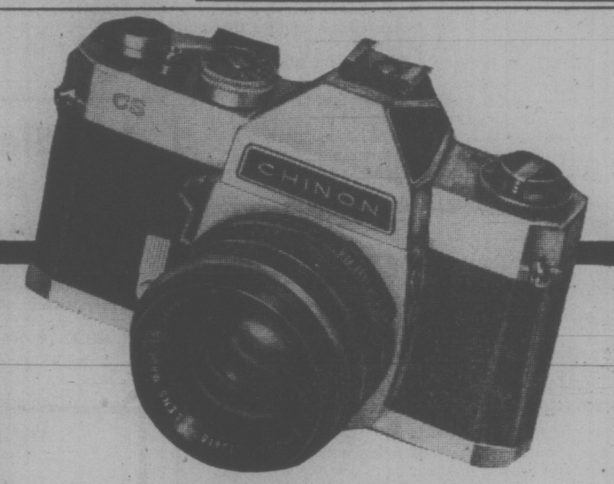

1 pound ground beef
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons water
4 weiners
4 weiner rolls, split and buttered
4 relish kabobs
prepared mustard

Combine ground beef, salt and water; divide into 4 portions. With a fork, flatten each portion of ground beef into a thin square pattie. Spread pattie with mustard. Place weiner on one edge. Cover by rolling the beef pattie around the weiner, seal the edges of the beef pattie. Place seam sice down in a shallow, greased baking dish. Bake in a 400°F over 20 minutes. Place meat between a split weiner roll. For each kabob, use a cherry tomato or radish, a piece of cheddar cheese and a dill pickle threaded on a metal skewer. Stick relish kabob in one end of the meat roll, to give the look of a rocket. Serves four.

Herb Pie Is Worth A Try

1½ lbs. ground beef
2 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 small onion, chopped (¼ cup)
4 tbsp. flour
1 can (about 1 pound) tomatoes
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
3 tbsp. grated Parmesan cheese
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. basil
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. garlic salt
½ tsp. oregano
⅛ tsp. pepper
Cheddar cheese slices or mozzarella cheese
Herb Pastry (recipe follows)

Brown ground beef in butter or margarine for about 10 minutes. Saute onion just until soft, in small pan. Blend in flour, tomatoes, tomato sauce, parmesan cheese and seasonings. Heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens slightly, then simmer 10 minutes. Stir in ground beef.

While filling simmers, make Herb Pastry. Roll out ⅔ of dough to a 12-inch round on a slightly floured pastry cloth or board; fit into a 9-inch pie plate. Trim overhang to ½ inch; turn under, flush with rim; flute to make a stand-up edge. Spoon meat mixture into prepared shell; arrange cheese slices on top. Roll out remaining pastry to ⅛ inch thickness; cut into rounds with a 2-inch cutter; place on top of cheese. Bake in hot oven (400°F) for 35 minutes or until pastry is golden and filling is bubbly hot. Cool 5 minutes on a wire rack; cut into wedge-shaped servings.

Getting Hung Up By a Phone Pest

DEAR ABBY: Please, in the interest of preserving my sanity, tell me how to get rid of a telephone pest.

This woman is a non-stop talker. She can go on for two hours at a stretch. Once I actually left the line for about five minutes and when I came back she was still talking. Another time I said, "Excuse me, I've got to go. I just cut myself and I am bleeding badly," and she said, "But this will only take a minute and it's interesting." (It wasn't.) She is the biggest bore I know.

Telling her that I am too busy to talk won't work. Please help me. I don't mind in the least if I lose her friendship.

GOING NUTS.

DEAR GOING: Your last sentence makes my suggested solution very simple. The next time she phones, tell her that you are too busy to visit with her, say goodbye, and then hang up. Repeat this routine as often as is necessary until your "friendship" dissolves.

DEAR ABBY: Joe is 53 and I'm 49. We've been married for 31 years and Joe has always travelled for a living.

I never suspected him of playing around until about six months ago when I unpacked his suitcase and found some hair (reddish) on his bathrobe. (I'm a brunette.) He said he couldn't help it if the motels had poor housekeeping.

The next time he came home, his overcoat reeked with perfume. He said the coat must have been hanging next to a lady's wrap in some restaurant. I suppose that's possible.

Yesterday while riding in his car I found a cigarette butt with lipstick on it in the ashtray. (I don't smoke.) He said he had no idea how it got there.

He doesn't act any different toward me. He's still the same sweet loving man, but all this evidence has made me suspicious.

If he were YOUR husband, what would YOU do?

SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I'd be the same sweet loving woman. I'd also keep my eyes open.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and I just had an argument and I want you to settle it.

Mary is married to a nice fellow. They have two sons, 11 and 8. My son-in-law has a poker game at the house once a week, and he lets the boys watch them play. The boys love to play cards, too. (They learned from watching their father.)

I told Mary I didn't think it was good for the boys to watch their father gamble, and she got very angry with me and said she saw nothing wrong with it.

Abby, don't you think this will influence the children to gamble? I say this because whenever the boys come to our house they want to play cards with my husband and me for money. We tell them we will play with them — but not for money.

What do you think?

CONCERNED GRANDMA

DEAR CONCERNED: I agree with you. Children should not gamble for money, but playing cards sharpens the wits and exercises one's mathematical ability. But you've expressed your views — now cool it, Granny.

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

"We're getting somewhere" was the enthusiastic comment of two cancer specialists. For a type of lung cancer and lymphocytic leukemia seemed to respond to total irradiation of the body.

Remission rates of almost 50 per cent followed the use of radiation chemotherapy and cortisone. This treatment for chronic leukemia seems to be highly impressive.

Dr. Ralph E. Johnson of the University of Florida in Gainesville recently said, "The combined treatment has opened new horizons for leukemia patients. We are at a point now where at least half of them are achieving a complete response. This will be translated into dramatic improvement in survival. Instead of living another two or three years, these patients can expect to live eight to 12 years." ★ ★ ★

A vaccine against pneumonia is leaving the drawing boards of speculation and is becoming more of a reality.

At the University of California in San Francisco, a group of doctors under the direction of Dr. Arthur J. Ammann have been using the new vaccine in children who have had their spleens removed because of injury or infection.

Children with sickle cell anemia were also given the vaccine. In all the cases studied, no pneumonia has occurred after vaccination.

The outlook for the vaccine is bright. Since the advent of the antibiotics, some of the pneumonia-causing bacteria have become resistant to the antibiotics. Consequently, the news that a vaccine against pneumonia is in active work comes as a great source of hope that one day the devastation from epidemics of pneumonia may be bypassed.

Certain kinds of epileptic seizures, especially in "petit mal," come on suddenly, without any warning. This is unlike the "grand mal" seizures of epilepsy which usually are preceded by some warning so that the victim can prepare in advance for an attack.

Dr. Alan F. Mirsky of Boston University is working on a miniature computer which will alert the victim of "petit mal" to an impending seizure.

Middle East Peace and You

God's plan with the earth is centered upon peace in the Middle East. Peace negotiations are in the forefront today, but only God holds the key to the ultimate answer of peace. As His plan unfolds the event in the Middle East will determine the future of all mankind.

Chicken, Turkey Parts Ideal Cooking for One

Cooking for one need not be a time consuming chore, done only out of necessity. Why not? Because it's always topped off with one of the greatest pleasures — eating!

Often times, single folk are tempted just to snack, as it seems hardly worthwhile to go to all the trouble of fixing meals for one. However, eating regular, well balanced meals does pay off. Unplanned meals can sometimes end up being poorly balanced, high in calories and low in nutrients.

Remember, each meal should include foods from each of the four food groups recommended in Canada's Food Guide: meat and alternates (such as poultry, liver, fish, peanut butter, peas, beans and lentils, cheese or eggs); fruits and vegetables (including at least two vegetables a day); milk and milk products; and breads and cereals.

And so plan ahead and shop accordingly. Remember—no food is a bargain if it is not going to be used before it spoils. Look for:

—small cuts of meat, packaged individually. Chicken parts are easily prepared for single servings.

—smaller size cans of fruits and vegetables. Leftovers can be placed in containers and refrigerated for use on another day.

—frozen vegetables, which are always in season and add variety to many meals. Small packages of most frozen vegetables will make four servings and so cook only what's needed and put the rest back in the freezer.

—canned soups which can be eaten as an appetizer for one meal and as a sauce for vegetables or meat at another.

It might seem hard at first to cook just enough for one but it gets easier with practice. When cooking more than enough for one meal, plan to prepare the leftovers in a different way or freeze for later use.

You may have to pamper yourself and your appetite. Prepare food in an appealing way. Vegetables and fruits are great choices and add color to any meal. And even colorful place mats and attractive dishes make food look good to eat.

A final tip — eating alone all the time may be lonely and frustrating. Try sharing your mealtime with friends. "Breaking Bread Together" can make the task of cooking seem worthwhile and make eating more enjoyable.

It takes a little effort to make yourself plan and prepare meals on a fairly regular basis, but it pays off in better health, and a more cheerful outlook on living.

Food consultants of Agriculture Canada encourage you singles to try cooking chicken or turkey parts. They're the perfect solution for a quick easy supper, especially when they're panfried. And for a little variety, treat yourself to "Oriental Chicken." It will make cooking alone well worth the effort.

HOW TO PANFRY CHICKEN PARTS

For each 500 g chicken mix 50 ml flour, 2 ml salt, 2 ml paprika and dash pepper in bag. Add chicken, a few pieces at a time and shake to coat evenly with seasoned flour. Heat 1 cm fat in heavy frypan until drop of water sizzels. Beginning with meatier pieces, fry chicken over moderate heat as directed.

TIMETABLE FOR PANFRYING CHICKEN PARTS

Chicken Parts	Cooking Time (Minutes Per Side)
Thighs	10
Legs (4 sides)	7
Breasts (½, boneless)	7
Wings	7

NOTE: Bone-in breasts can not be panfried because they become too brown during cooking.

ORIENTAL CHICKEN

50 ml oil
25 ml vinegar
10 ml soy sauce
4 ml ginger
2 ml salt
0.5 ml pepper
10 ml brown sugar
1 chicken leg.

Combine all ingredients except chicken leg and blend well. Pour marinade over chicken and let stand 2 to 3 hours at room temperature, turning several times. Drain off and reserve marinade. Bake at 180°C until tender (about 50 minutes), turning halfway through cooking. heat reserved marinade and pour over chicken before serving. 1 serving.

Debt Unpaid

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The Bible on which Gov. Brendan Byrne took the oath of office for his second term is one of the unpaid debts of the Byrne Inaugural Committee, a report says.

Joseph Santangelo, the governor's chief spokesman, said he bought it the day before the inauguration last month, and hasn't been reimbursed.

"Does it say when I'm going to get my cheque?" he asked about the report, issued Friday.

A Million Dollars For Name Change

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

HARROGATE, England (CP) — By merely changing his name, a 28-year-old British army officer has inherited more than £600,000 ($1.3 million) with a stately 30-room mansion amid the rolling hills and dales of North Yorkshire.

The estate was left to Capt. Mark Russell-Scarr by his 82-year-old cousin Alice Hildegard Meysey-Thompson, on condition he changed his surname to hers. So now, as Mark Meysey-Thompson, he has moved out of the barracks into magnificent Spellow Hall, a picturesque 17th-century property.

His last military duty was commanding one of the army fire crews which operated on an emergency basis during the recent national firemen's strike. Previously he served with the Royal Green Jackets in Northern Ireland, Malaya, Cyprus, Germany and Norway.

"Miss Meysey-Thompson was very proud of her family name and was most anxious it should be kept alive," the captain said. "At one time the name was very well known in Yorkshire history and it dates back to the 15th century.

"I am proud to carry it on, but I have no intention of becoming a country squire or a gentleman of leisure. I'm supposed to go on an army resettlement course soon and I've applied to do painting, decorating and house maintenance.

"Changing my name was no problem but I suppose people who have known me all my life will find it rather strange at first."

The captain said he and his 26-year-old wife Catherine are expecting a baby in May.

Roll Out the Barrel

SPOKANE (AP) — Students participating in Eastern Washington University's third annual keg-tossing contest are perfecting their techniques to hurl the 30-pound suds containers as far as they can.

But no muscle strain is involved. The students will be using catapults.

The event takes place April 29 at Spokane Raceway Park.

The main rule is that the catapults must be mechanical — use of chemical, electrical or thermal energy is banned.

The record, set last year, is 890 feet.

BUDGETING WORKSHOP

A workshop on limited income budgeting will be held from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Saturday at the Community Diversion Centre, 610 Gorge Road.

Fee for the workshop, co-sponsored by Prime Time and Camosun College, is $1 and child care facilities will be available.

Participants should bring a list of monthly expenditures and commitments, as well as their lunch.

The session will include a two-hour discussion with a panel of women who are successfully coping on limited incomes.

Details on month-to-month planning, special family needs, financial survival tips and planning ahead for once-a-year payments will be outlined.

Registrations can be made by phoning Prime Time at 388-6101.

Clark Ponders an April Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark, on his second anniversary as Progressive Conservative leader, is braced for an election as early as April in the face of what he sees as the decomposition of Pierre Trudeau's government.

"The old manipulators," he says of the long-governing Liberals, learning back, his hands locked behind his head, a look of satisfaction on his face, "are losing their control."

Clark is still trailing in popularity polls, head of a party chronically weak in Quebec, suffering, slightly, under the old designation "Joe Who," and clearly conscious of the 50 new seats he has to win if he is to become prime minister.

But Clark, a slender 38, exudes a certain nervous optimism as he contemplates his third year as Opposition leader and the federal election to come.

During the last year, he has toughed out a dramatic slide in political popularity, defections and internal party squabbles. He has emerged with a new hair-do, a crisp, confident television image and an outwardly-united party.

In an anniversary interview with The Canadian Press, Clark, the compromise choice of a split Conservative convention two years ago, says he is sure he is in command.

He openly acknowledges the troubles that plagued him during the year and candidly concedes that he hasn't any idea whether he'll form a majority government.

What is clear, he says, is that the Liberals are in trouble, that Conservatives will make substantial gains in the next election, that holding the 90 Commons seats he has won't be nearly as difficult as winning the extra 50 he needs.

Trudeau, he adds, could even call a snap April vote this weekend. If he does, "it would be because he sees his government decomposing around him."

"One option open to a government, when it feels it is falling apart, is to go quickly." But he says he thinks a summer election is more likely.

Whenever the election comes, Clark insists he is ready to roll. Candidates are coming forward, advertising material is off the press and Clark himself is maintaining a meet-the-people travel schedule that averages more than 6,500 miles a month.

The Opposition party gave him a solid vote of support at a leadership convention last November, and he has the signature of the country's five Conservative premiers on a party proposal for constitutional reform and economic power-sharing nailed down last September in Kingston, Ont.

His central problem then, he says, was getting people to run.

"I couldn't recruit candidates, the kind that give you that extra edge."

Now, he argues that the situation has changed, that strong candidates are "sitting down seriously, talking to their spouses, figuring out if they can cut themselves loose."

"I'm quite pleased with the state we're in on the candidates side."

Clark attributes the turnaround in his fortunes — polls now show the party with about 34 per cent support, compared with about 42 for Liberals — to two things: the decomposition of the government and television.

The government had stopped governing and the party was falling apart.

The Liberal party, Clark says with the experience of a consummate political organizer, "usually handles things smoothly."

"They are past masters at using the public purse for party gain," he says.

"They've been doing that with immense clumsiness lately."

Clark cites government bungling during the recent federal-provincial economic conference, the surprise resignation of former solicitor-general Francis Fox and heavy-handed action by Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, the chief Liberal organizer in Quebec, as examples of a government in decline.

He argues that the government is doing everything it can to keep economic issues off the parliamentary agenda. Competition legislation, changes in the Bank Act and a new federal budget had all been pushed to the side to keep attention off economic concerns.

Meanwhile, Clark says both he and his party have benefited from the introduction last fall of television in the Commons.

Television, he says, "has made me seem to be a more effective leader." And it had given his front-bench critics a higher profile.

"There is now a sense that there is a government on our side, that there are ministers on our side."

During his second year as leader, Clark says he counts as perhaps his most positive achievement success in pulling the often-fractious Conservative party together.

"When things were really lousy for us, I didn't crumble," he says, recalling Jack Horner's defection to the Liberal government last April, his own slide in popularity.

"I'm surprised first of all that some people thought I might."

Clark says the fact he survived the year has earned him a "real rock basis of confidence" in the party.

"A combination of making it clear to people who were going to cause trouble, that if they caused too much trouble they would be doing it elsewhere, and toughing it through a very difficult time in the life of the party, that demonstrates my own ability to lead."

TREES TIP WEATHER

SEATTLE (AP) — Tall trees, long standing silent in the Pacific Northwest wilderness, are finally starting to talk — about the weather.

Dr. Linda B. Brubaker of the University of Washington's College of Forest Resources is the interpreter. She takes cores from hundreds of trees in the Olympics, Cascades and Blue Mountain ranges to study their rings, which are affected by weather.

To test their accuracy she compared tree-ring records since 1900 with the written record of human weather observers. She found trees grew faster in years with wetter weather. Conversely, warm, dry summers and falls slowed tree growth.

Preliminary results of the tree ring data prior to human records indicates short-term fluctuations for the most part.

A few exceptions included a period of cool, wet summers from 1800 through 1830.

The most dramatic episodes of unusual weather in the 300-year record of tree rings were a string of cool, rainy summers from 1900 to 1918 and a long dry spell that started in 1920 and continued more or less through 1940.

Brubaker said the toughest part was finding trees undisturbed by influences other than weather. She had to look hard to reach sites for trees undisturbed by insects, fire or loggers.

She used a boring device to take a pencil-thin core from 10 to 15 trees in each of 38 stands. She says that doesn't hurt the trees; they seal the tiny holes by themselves.

The longest record of any of the 14-inch cores was 630 years. One that did not reach the centre of the tree was estimated to be 1,000 years old.

Banks Unfair —Union

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the Service, Office and Retail Workers Union (SORWUC) said Tuesday that two banks are discriminating against union members by withholding annual wage increases.

The union's Local 2, the United Bank Workers, is pressing unfair labor practice charges against the Royal Bank, the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Bank of Commerce, and hearings are being held this week by the Canada Labor Relations Board.

The union wants the annual increase passed on to workers in the 18 British Columbia bank branches that have union members, although negotiations for a first contract have not been completed.

Bank Workers representative Heather MacNeil said, however, the Royal Bank insists that SORWUC agree that the annual increases of 10 per cent is the final settlement. The Bank of Nova Scotia is giving its employees a six-per-cent increase, she said.

"By holding back systemwide increases and improvements to union branches, the banks not only are punishing employees who have chosen to join the union but also are intimidating and threatening other employees who may be thinking about joining the union," said Jackie Ainsworth, Bank Workers vice-president.

Ms. Ainsworth said the federal labor code fails to protect unionized units from discrimination.

"This is precisely one of the reasons why the union has decided to stop applying for individual branches and instead apply for a provincial unit," she said. "By going for a provincial unit the banks will not be able to discriminate against individual branches."

Jail Staff Confused In Crisis - Prisoner

VANCOUVER (CP) — A prisoner at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) said Tuesday that prison staff were uncertain what to do during an attempt to save the life of Marilyn Gardiner, a prisoner who died in February, 1974 after she had a seizure and fell into a bathtub full of water.

Danise Morris said she and another prisoner tried to revive Gardiner with artificial respiration while eight staff members, including the warden and jail nurse, crowded into the prison washroom.

"None of them knew what to do," Morris said. "They weren't equipped to handle a life-and-death situation. We asked for an oxygen tank because the water was almost completely pumped out of her system."

When the tank finally came the prisoners, familiar with the use of oxygen equipment, were pushed aside, Morris said.

A prison staff member tried to apply the oxygen, putting the wrong end of the disconnected hose into Gardiner's mouth.

"By the time this was straightened out, the rest of the oxygen equipment had been wheeled away," Morris said.

Gardiner was still alive when the two other prisoners were taken away because "the men were coming."

"We thought they meant a doctor but it was two male guards from down the hill (the men's prison)," Morris said.

"They heaved Marilyn out of the bathtub like a piece of dead meat and carried her to the table in the day room for group six."

Gardiner was pronounced dead 15 minutes later by a doctor Morris described as "a man about 22, too young to have a medical degree."

Morris said she wrote a two-page report on the incident the next day, and, as a result her room was searched and she was summoned to the director's office.

"The warden blasted me for writing the article and tore it up in front of me," she said.

"Prisoners are never asked to testify at such inquests," said Morris, 25, now serving her second term at Oakalla, a 30-month sentence for trafficking in narcotics.

Morris was testifying at an inquiry into conditions at women's prisons in British Columbia.

Storms Curtail Rail Cars

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Severe winter storms hitting the northeastern United States are causing a major shortage of rail cars for lumber producers here, Al Menard, spokesman for Canadian National Railways, said Monday.

Menard said Prince George is short between 300 and 400 rail cars.

He said CNR has imposed an embargo against rail traffic to nine United States states hit hardest by the winter storms in an effort to minimise car tie-ups.

States affected by the embargo are Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Conneticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Menard said there are about 22,000 rail cars tied up in the Eastern U.S., about 5,000 more than normal.

$400,000 Earmarked For Water Weed Tests

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government will spend more than $400,000 this year on aquatic weed control research says a spokesman for Environment Minister Len Marchand.

Matt Hughes, Marchand's executive assistant, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa Monday that a $320,000 program over and above the $85,000 in research already announced will be set up to examine both mechanical and chemical control methods.

Hughes said that an announcement of the funding was scheduled to be made when Prime Minister Trudeau visited the Okanagan earlier this month, but was cancelled when the prime minister injured his back.

Of the $320,000, he said $100,000 will be spent on national research into all types of water weed, not just milfoil.

There will be $200,000 spent on analysis and assessment of weed control methods in various parts of the country and this program will start in the Okanagan which has one of the worst infestations of Eurasian milfoil.

The final $20,000 will be spent in the Okanagan on a social-economic study of the impact of the weed on local communities.

Farm Support 'Abandoned'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture Tuesday said the provincial government is abandoning income support for farmers under the pretense of saving taxpayers' money.

Pat Hibbert said farmers feel that changes in B.C.'s farm income assurance program announced by Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt indicate that he wants farmers to sell their land.

The assurance programs, covering 10 commodities, are based on insurance principals, and give farmers 75 per cent of their production costs when these are not received from the market place.

Paish Probers Deny They Were Drunk

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two conservation officers who investigated charges under the Wildlife Act against outfitter Howard Paish denied Tuesday that they were intoxicated while questioning informer Gerry Gibbons.

Gibbons, a former employee of Paish, last week told the provincial inquiry into the issuing of outfitters' licences that he and conservation officers Leo Van Tine and Clarence Williams all were intoxicated during the three interviews.

Van Tine testified Tuesday that he and Williams first interviewed Gibbons at Cache Creek Nov. 8, 1975 when a truck loaded with moose and caribou horns that had been driven by Gibbons was stopped at the game-checking station.

"We had to get Gibbons from a bar in Cache Creek, "he said." He had been drinking but was not drunk. "Gibbons said he felt Paish would fire him, and Gibbons would come back and tell us a lot more."

Van Tine said the second interview was held Nov. 14, 1975 at 100 Mile House.

"There was liquor present and Gibbons had been drinking but was not drunk," he said. I had a drink during the interview but certainly was not drunk."

Van Tine said he and Williams were interviewing other witnesses in Smithers later that month when Gibbons came to their room.

"He was uninvited, intoxicated and made a nuisance of himself. He was asked to leave."

Van Tine said some of the information obtained from Gibbons turned out to be incorrect, and he was asked to make a written statement the following March. He agreed there was a substantial difference between the original report based on the two interviews with Gibbons and the written statement.

Van Tine said at least four of the charges against Paish were a direct result from information supplied by Gibbons.

"We would not have had any charges if Gibbons did not tell us about other people to see, including hunters and guides."

Provincial Court Judge J. L. McCarthy, who is conducting the inquiry, said Tuesday's session ended the first part of the hearing that centred around charges laid against Paish. He said the next part of the inquiry will consist of written briefs, to be submitted by March 3, by interested parties.

B.C. Rail Extension 'Unfeasible'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Mac Norris, president of the British Columbia Railway, said Tuesday BCR management has resigned itself to the fact that the railway's Dease Lake extension is not economically feasible at this time.

Norris said in an interview following a speech to a service club that while the royal commission investigating the BCR has filed an interim report, the BCR management does not know what its recommendations are.

Work on the extension was halted in 1977 pending the commission's report.

Norris said BCR executives are convinced, partly on the basis of information disclosed at commission hearings, that to continue work on the line would not be possible because it would cost about $38 million dollars--money the railway doesn't have.

Norris would not speculate on the future of the Fort Nelson line extension.

PEAR CROP PAYMENT

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Canada announced Tuesday a stabilization payment on British Columbia's 1976 winter pear crop that could reach $750,000.

Growers each will receive 4.2 cents a pound on their eligible production up to a maximum of 100,000 pounds.

Individual growers will not have to submit applications for this program. But the department said in future programs individual producer applications will be made available to ensure prompt payment.

TV Fans Agreeable To $100 Cable Fee

OTTAWA (CP) — Most residents of Clayton Hills, a farm community of about 600 near New Westminster, are so eager to receive extra television services they are willing to pay $100 each for cable TV, a federal official said today.

The $100-installation fee to be charged by Western Cablevision Ltd. has been approved by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) although all other Western subscribers are only charged $25.

But the CRTC said it approved the unusually-high rate for Clayton Hills because a survey of the residents showed that most are willing to pay it.

A CRTC official said the higher fee stems from the extra construction costs of installing cable in a widely-dispersed low-density community.

The official did not know how many extra channels residents would receive with cable. Usually cable greatly increases the number of stations received and improves reception.

BRICKLIN AUCTION SET

VANCOUVER (CP) — Maynard's Auctioneers Ltd. of Vancouver will write the final chapter in the ill-fated Bricklin Canada Ltd. sports car venture.

The Vancouver firm has been chosen to auction off the remaining assets of the New Brunswick car-manufacturing operation which received more than $20 million in provincial funds.

Barry Scott, vice-president of Maynard's, said the sale will take place Thursday and Friday in Minto, N.B. and St. John, N.B.

POPPY CURBS RAISE COSTS

ANKARA (AP) — Turkey, once considered a major supplier of heroin to the illicit American market, now grows the opium poppy under such strict controls that no leakage has been reported since it resumed production in 1974.

But the cost has been increasing difficulties in marketing its legal crop for the world pharmaceutical industry.

Farmers in seven Turkish provinces, where the poppy can be grown legally, use the "straw process' method in harvesting. This means they cannot cut the pod for the plant to let the opium gum ooze out. Instead the pods are left to dry on their long stalks and are sold to the state soil products office with the alkaloid content intact.

The office, in turn, has to seek buyers in a sluggish market for a product which is much more difficult to process than the raw opium gum.

Officials from the soil products office say only the Netherlands and Australia outside the Communist world have the sophisticated plants for extracting morphine and derivatives from the dried pod.

Turkey banned opium poppy cultivation in 1972 under heavy pressure from the United States, which claimed at the time that 80 per cent of the heroin reaching American addicts originated in Turkish poppy fields.

Since then, Mexico and Southeast Asia's golden triangle are reported to have filled in the vacuum left by the Turkish ban.

Dropout Mathematician Chinese Hero

PEKING (Reuter) — A Chinese mathematician who has made advances in a problem of no apparent practical importance has been raised to the status of national hero.

A story of the life and work of Chen Jing-run recently took up most of the party newspaper People's Daily as well as The Guangming Daily and specialized magazines.

Chinese say the account is one of the best human interest stories published in years.

The saga of Chen not only offers insight into what the Chinese regard as human interest, but demonstrates the about-face Chinese science has made since the Cultural Revolution, when research had to yield practical results to be admired.

Chen has been trying to prove the Goldbach Conjecture, put forward in 1742 by a German after whom it is named. It states that any even number can be represented as the sum of two prime numbers (numbers divisible only by themselves and the number one). No one has thought of a case when this is not so. The problem is proving it always is so.

Chen had been working on the problem for 15 years when he was cited as an outstanding contributor to Chinese science. He has managed to officialy prove that any sufficiently large number can be represented as one prime plus the product of at most two primes—which some experts consider as progress toward proving the conjecture.

But readers are attracted not by the mathematics but by the tale of a man who survived a life of hardship, ill-health, loneliness and official persecution to make good; a school dropout who became a research fellow at the Institute of Mathematics in the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

The 44-year-old Chen has been constantly in and out of the hospital with tuberculosis and other diseases, and was persecuted by the extremist Gang of Four.

The Guangming Daily said Gang followers called him "a sapling of revisionism, a typical example of someone white (a person with little political consciousness), an expert, an idiot, a parasite and an exploiter."

Chen first heard of the Goldbach problem in high school, which he had to leave because his family was poor. Later, He was a school teacher in Peking but was not at it, the paper said, and was also in the hospital six times in one year.

He finally secured a job as a librarian at Amoy University where he was discovered by China's top mathematician Hua Lo-keng and transferred in 1956 to the institute.

A magazine article said Chen works from dawn late into the night and that he has published more than 40 papers since 1956.

Both newspapers held him up as an example to be copied by everyone in a country which has ambitious moderization plans.

In London, Dr. Robert Vaughan of Imperial College said Chen is very well thought of in the West and British mathematicians are trying to have him there for a visit.

He said that while Chen's work is important to number theory, especially his work on other classical problems, Western experts feel Goldbach's Conjecture remained as far from formal proof as ever.

Vaughan said Western experts cannot understand Chen's first partial proof, published in 1966 at the beginning of the Cultural Revolution, because it was only a few pages long and all the calculations were left out, apparently for obscure political reasons.

"Chen had to virtually go into hiding," Vaughan said, and it was only in 1973 that he was able to publish a 20-page proof, which made his name in the West.

APPEAL TO POPE

GENEVA (Reuter) — A sister of the late Argentine revolutionary Ernesto (Che) Guevara has sent a telegram to Pope Paul saying another brother Juan Martin is dying in an Argentine jail and not receiving adequate medical care.

A copy of the telegram was sent to the Geneva-based International Commission of the Red Cross (ICRC) and the United Nations Human Rights Commission, now holding its annual session here.

Argentine dissident sources released copies to the news media.

The telegram, signed by Celia Guevara and Uruguayan Senator Enrique Erro, called on the pope and the two international bodies to intercede with the Argentine government on behalf of 38-year-old Juan Martin Guevara.

The sources said he was sent to jail three years ago and has been in the Sierra Chica prison in Cordoba province without trial. He is suffering from anemia but is being denied necessary medical care, they said.

Che Guevara was a leading figure in the Cuban revolution in the 1950s and became a minister in Fidel Castro's government. He later took up arms against the regime in Bolivia, where he was killed in 1967.

Tax Rebate Firms Find Loopholes

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the provincial consumer and corporate affairs department said Tuesday that several operations are exploiting loopholes in the Consumer Protection Act and are making more money on buying tax-rebate forms than those whose operations inspired the legislation.

Art Cooper, a consumer affairs investigator, confirmed that there are several such schemes in the area, and all appear to be legal.

A spokesman for the Better Business Bureau in Victoria said today there is no indication of such schemes being carried out here.

Cooper said the operation involves:

—A buyer pays 85 per cent of what a seller is owed by the federal government, but will accept only forms filled out by a particular firm, connected with the buyer, which collects additional 15 per cent;

—The buyer will not accept forms filled out by individuals or other companies;

—The buyer then holds back an additional 25 per cent, which he says is to protect himself against false claims.

"The two (tax buyers and tax preparers) appear to work in conjunction," said Cooper. "And the 25 per cent 'holding fee' can be taken because while the legislation says that the buyer has to return 85 per cent of the total available to him, it doesn't say when it has to be returned.

"So they pay out 60 per cent and hold back the 25 per cent. Usually they'll claim that's protection against false claims.

"However, you consider the people who usually are selling their claims," said Cooper. "How often do they have a permanent address? And how hard is the buyer going to look for them when they get the money from Ottawa?"

Richard Gordon, of Harbor Tax Services, said that there is no collaboration between the preparers and the buyers of the tax rebates and that only five per cent of his clients fail to get back the 25-per-cent holding fee.

He said he is bound by a letter he has signed with the federal income tax department, and could be fined $25,000 or given a year in prison if he did not honor the conditions for repaying his clients.

Provincial legislation passed last year limits the percentage paid to a tax-buyer to 15 per cent.

FOOD'S IMPACT ON CPI DROPS

OTTAWA (CP) — The impact of food prices on the Consumer Price Index (CPI), the monthly barometer of increases in the cost of living, will be reduced starting in June, Industry Minister Jack Horner said today.

Horner told a national food strategy conference the change will reflect the increased consumption of food outside the home and the decreasing amount of disposable income Canadians spend on food.

In an interview afterwards, Horner said food now accounts for 27 per cent to 28 per cent of the CPI but it could be dropped to as low as 20 per cent. It would be the first such change since 1968.

Egypt Raps Cyprus

Times News Services

CAIRO — Egypt no longer recognizes Spyros Kyprianou as president of Cyprus, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said today while speaking after the funeral of the 15 Egyptian commandos killed in Cyprus last Sunday.

"As of today, we withdraw out recognition" of Kyprianou, Sadat said in a speech to Egyptian troops.

He rejected any idea of meeting with the Cypriot leader—"we have nothing to say to each other."

"Egypt demands that Cyprus turn over the two murderers of Youssef Sebaei," Sadat said.

Sadat was referring to the two Palestinians who shot el-Sebaei, editor-in-chief of the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram, in Nicosia at a conference of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Organization, of which he was the secretary-general.

The Palestinians then seized hostages at the conference, whom the Egyptian commandos were attempting to rescue the following day at the airport when fired on by Cypriot security forces.

"The Palestinians should know better than other Arabs that Egypt will reposte 10 times harder to each blow against it," Sadat said.

"Egypt is defending Palestine everywhere yet, at the same time, some Palestinians are hiring themselves out as killers. Egypt will trample on these dwarfs no matter what the price."

Sadat made the speech after leading about 10,000 mourners at an emotional state funeral for the slain commandos.

"No more Palestine after today!" the crowd screamed as Sadat and his entire cabinet walked behind three closed ambulances carrying coffins.

Official announcers said the soldiers were "martyrs of treachery and the victims of Cypriot collusion."

It was Sadat's first public apearance since the commando raid failed Sunday night.

The funeral, held in the Cairo suburb were the tomb of Egypt's unknown soldier is located, was broadcast nationwide by radio and television.

Sadat awarded the dead commandos the Star of Winai, Egypt's highest military decoration.

Brig. Nabil Shukry, leader of the raid, and other survivors, marched in the procession. About 1,000 troops and 100 floral wreaths preceded the official mourners and the chanting crowd that swarmed along the route.

Kyprianou, meanwhile, suspended Cyprus' deputy police chief today for his role in Sunday night's battle.

Pavlos Stokkos, the second-ranking policeman in Greek-controlled Cyprus, was suspended "for communicating false information regarding the events at Larnaca airport and for negligence in the execution of his duties," an official statement said without elaboration.

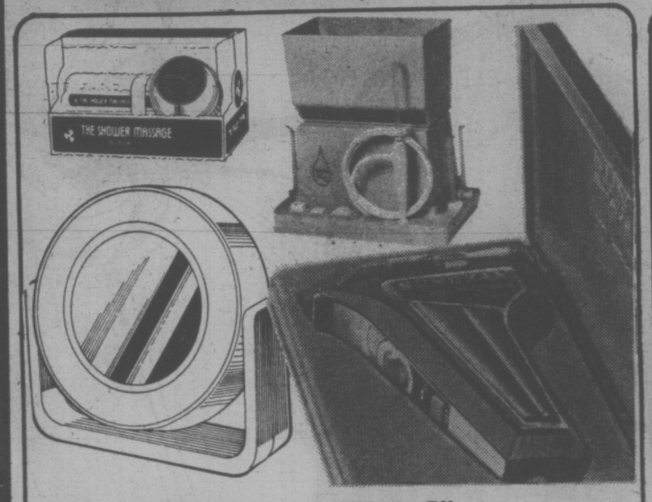

Assault Plea Guilty

Guilty pleas were entered Tuesday in county court by Rick Darrell Eric Gouge, 25, charged with two counts of indecent assault on females.

He was remanded in custody to March 21 for sentencing by Judge E.J.C. Stewart.

Charges related to Sept. 20, 1977, when Gouge tried to force himself on an 18-year-old girl while parked at the end of a secluded road near Colwood, and to Jan. 28 when he molested a six-year-old girl at the place he boarded while free on bail.

Transit Workers Voting Thursday

B.C. Hydro transit workers begin voting Thursday on a mediation report while gas workers continue preparations for a strike they say could begin later this week.

The report, prepared by mediator Ken Albertini, offers a compromise solution to the issue of a revised spare-board operation, a revision demanded by the company. It also rejects a request by the Amalgamated Transit Union for a shorter work week.

A rejection of the report by the union would open the way for a strike by 3,500 bus drivers, trainmen and mechanics.

Albertini is report proposes that the spare-board operation, a system for assigning work during peak periods, go to a five-member committee for arbitration.

"It's a letdown," said a union official. "Spare board is to go to arbitration and the shorter work week wasn't even mentioned."

Neither the company nor the union recommended acceptance or rejection of the report following special meetings Monday and Tuesday.

"It's entirely up to the membership," a union spokesman said. "Then we will know which way we are going."

He said the union expects to know the results of the vote by Friday.

Hydro transit spokesman Harry Atterton said management is studying the report.

The mediation report deals with three other issues supporting the union position that current practices guiding travel time and work assignments be retained while recommending that overtime problems affecting only spare-board operators also be resolved by arbitration.

Hydro has said it will save $500,000 if it can gain control of the spare board now governed by 150 union bylaws. Albertini proposes that the committee headed by a chairman with the authority to make binding decision resolve the issue by July 1, 1978.

The union also sought parity with other Hydro workers, who receive an extra 17 days off a year or work a four-day week every other week. In recommending no change in the hours of work, Albertini noted that the company is "adamant, considering the increasing deficit, that it cannot agree to any demand that will increase the cost of the transit operation."

Earlier the two parties agreed to a two-year contract expiring July 31, 1979 with a wage increase of 6.1 per cent in the first year and four per cent in the second.

PREP Chief Shifted

Ronald Stew will be shifted from his job as co-ordinator of the provincial government's controversial Provincial Rehabilitation and Employment Program (PREP), Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday.

Vander Zalm said that Stew, now in Surrey Memorial Hospital for surgery, will be posted to a different position when he returns to work in four to eight weeks. The position will involve promoting jobs for the handicapped.

Vander Zalm denied that Stew, 55, had been fired from PREP or was being demoted, saying he will get the same pay as he did as PREP co-ordinator. Vander Zalm said there was no disciplinary action.

Stew helped organize PREP, a program to find jobs for those on welfare, which started in May, 1976.

AIB Probe Of Tel

VANCOUVER (CP) — It may be months before the federal anti-inflation board decides whether wages and benefits paid B.C. Telephone Co. supervisors during a recent three-month dispute exceeded federal guidelines, board commissioner Gordon Anderson said Tuesday.

The investigation is the result of accusations by the Telecommunications Workers Union that fringe benefits and salaries, up to $3,500 a month, paid to 2,000 supervisors during the strike-lockout, violate the federal wage controls.

The union also argues that B.C. Tel made windfall profits during the dispute.

Anderson said it will take the board some time to examine B.C. Tel's explanation of the wages paid to supervisors.

The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, the federal regulatory body that sets rates, will decide if excessive profits have been made, Anderson said.

The union says the company saved about $27 million by not paying $500,000 a day in wages, and argues that each telephone subscriber should be given a $15 refund.

Union business agent Ian Edgar said the board appears to be "copping-out — there seems to be a practice of shuffling things off on another government agency."

The B.C. branch of the Consumers Association of Canada also believes that B.C. Tel made windfall profits during the dispute and is demanding that the CRTC examine the situation.

Outfall Foiled Again

The provincial pollution control board has withdrawn a permit issued to the Capital Regional District for the construction of a 360-metre outfall to discharge raw sewage off Esquimalt Lagoon from a 70-home subdivision bordering the lagoon.

District chairman Jim Campbell said Tuesday the decision means the lagoon will continue to be polluted until a solution can be found to the existing faulty septic tank systems in the subdivision.

He said it is unfortunate that a group of malcontents had succeeded in opposing the project favored by the regional health officer, marine biologists and pollution control branch engineers.

A permit for the outfall was issued in 1976, but the plan was withdrawn on appeal and another permit issued for an amended plan. This permit was withdrawn Tuesday, again on appeal.

The $350,000 outfall project was initiated after home-owners in the subdivision launched legal action against the region when it was found that faulty sewage disposal systems had been approved by regional inspectors.

They were ordered to correct their own systems, but the orders were not enforced for the proposed outfall.

7% IWA Increase Approved by AIB

The federal Anti-Inflation Board has approved a two-year contract between the B.C. forest industry and the International Woodworkers of America, a union spokesman said Tuesday.

Jack Munro, IWA regional president, said the contract includes an increase in wages and benefits of about seven per cent.

This will provide a 60-cent an hour increase in the first year of the contract for the 45,000 union members covered by the agreement, he said.

Munro said he was becoming concerned that the AIB might roll back the wage provision of the contract, adding that would have been disastrous to the union.

BENEFACTOR HUNT TO SAVE PORTRAIT

LONDON — London's Tate Gallery appealed for a "rich benefactor" Tuesday to help it buy the famous Gainsborough portrait of British brewer Ben Truman to stop the painting from going to Yale University's Centre for the Study of British Art.

Sir Maxwell Joseph, head of Grand Metropolitan Hotels, which owns Truman's Brewery, has sold the portrait to the American musuem for $855,000, but an export licence has been withheld until April 6 to let a British museum try to match the price.

The portrait, reproduced on Truman's bottled beer labels, hung for years in the brewery's boardroom.

Tate Chairman Lord Bullock said that because of tax concessions the portrait would cost the gallery about $760,000, but the gallery is $238,000 short.

"We are hoping for a rich benefactor," he said. "We have made a number of approaches to various people, but nothing has happened. If we can't raise the money the picture will leave the country."

Tearing Up the Tab at 94

NEW YORK — Genovese Camlin will celebrate her 94th birthday Saturday by tearing up her $10,000 tab at the Greenwich Village bar where she has downed a bottle of Guinness stout daily for the last 10 years.

"I need something to sip between puffs of the two cigarettes I smoke over there," she explained.

"Guinness to her is like a vitamin pill," said saloonkeeper Danny Lettieri, whose tavern is open seven days a week.

Lettieri said Tuesday that allowing Miss Camlin to tear up the bill is the least he could do.

"She was 83 when she asked if she could run up the tab," said Lettieri. "And I figured . . . how long could it last?"

Censor Forgot Bleep

NEW YORK — The NBC television network said Tuesday it regrets that a slang expression was not bleeped out of the Tonight Show.

"We're sorry it happened," a spokesman said, adding that the NBC switchboard received about 130 protest calls after comedian Steve Martin used the word Monday night.

Substituting as host for Johnny Carson, Martin said he used to make up football cheers such as: "Rah! Rah! Rah! Beat the scumbags!"

The NBC spokesman said the censor responsible for bleeping such words did not know its meaning, particularly for New Yorkers.

"There are a lot of connotations for that word," he said.

Such as?

"Well, a low-life person."

Judge In Polanski Case Disqualifies Himself

LOS ANGELES — The trial judge in the Roman Polanski case agreed Tuesday to disqualify himself from sentencing the film director.

But Santa Monica Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband said the disqualification statement filed against him by Polanski's lawyer contains errors and distortions.

In a six-page response to the challege from lawyer Douglas Dalton, Rittenband said he was removing himself from the case only to avoid "needless delays and court proceedings."

Polanski fled the country Jan. 31, one day before Rittenband was to sentence him.

He said he fled what he believed would be an unfair sentence from a biased judge. French citizens cannot be extradited from France, but in some cases they may be prosecuted in France for crimes committed outside.

Rittenband said he was confident that "any judge of the Superior Court upon reviewing the files in this case will impose an appropriate sentence on Mr. Polanski."

Of Dalton's 17-page bias motion, Rittenband said: "The factual distortions and inaccuracies . . . are too numerous to deny and correct on a line-by-line basis. However, the interpretations put on events by Mr. Dalton are denied."

THIS SCORNED WIFE CAME OUT FIGHTING

LONDON — Judge Anthony Ewbank granted accountant John Kelland a divorce Tuesday, observing that when Mrs. Kelland learned her husband had a mistress she engaged in "unreasonable behaviour," to wit:

She pummeled Kelland with a rolling pin so severely he could not drive; dragged him along the ground by the hair; locked him out of their house in Hertford, secured the windows, silenced the door bell and made him sleep in the car he could no longer drive, and finally burned his stamp collection and new dress shirt and threw away the gold cuff-links given him by his mistress.

Ewbank found the adultery by Kelland, 42, "infinitely worse" than the retribution he had just recited, but granted the divorce to him because Betty Kelland, 40, did not ask for one.

She denied the marriage had broken down.

Sale Goes Ahead

DETROIT — Cristina Ford, the estranged wife of Henry Ford II, has lost her bid to block the sale of $2 million in furnishings from the couple's Grosse Pointe Farms mansion and New York apartment.

After three days of hearings, Wayne County Circuit Judge John Kirwan denied Mrs. Ford's motion for an injuction to halt Saturday's auction at the Sotheby Parke Bernet Galleries in New York.

Mrs. Ford, 48, had testified that she was emotionally attached to the antique furniture, porcelains and snuff-boxes to be sold at the auction.

A Sad Day for the Irish When Carol Bows Out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — March 17 usually is party time. It is St. Patrick's Day, which means strong drink, cheers for the Irish. But in a way, it will be a sad day for Carol Burnett.

It is when the red-haired star says she will tape the 268th and last chapter of CBS's weekly Carol Burnett Show, ending an 11-year run that outlasted the reigns of three presidents at her network.

"It's like graduating from school," she said. "It's that feeling you get where another door is opening. We've seen births, deaths, divorces, marriages here, and it's like another family.

"And that's the sad part, of not seeing those people on a day-to-day basis."

Miss Burnett is voluntarily ending her weekly show, following the path previously taken by CBS' two other top ladies of comedy, Mary Tyler Moore and Lucille Ball.

Like them, she has no plans of retiring from television.

"I just want to exhale for a year," says the lady, owner of five Emmy awards.

Miss Burnett, 42, born in San Antonio, Tex., but raised and educated here, had cellar-dweller ratings for her variety show this season, but said that is not the readon she is ending it.

"We've been in the toilet before," she laughed, adding that CBS never even brought up the subject of those low ratings with her.

In fact, she said, Robert Daly, president of CBS' entertainment arm, "said, 'Look, you can go another 10 years as far as the network is concerned.' I said, 'Good God, no, who wants to do that?'

"Then I wouldn't be young enough to do what I want to do."

What finally convinced her it was time to hang it up, she said, was when she began noticing that skits cooked up for her show often had premises she'd done in seasons past.

The writing still was excellent, she said, "but about 80 per cent of the time I found myself, or those of us who've been here a while, saying 'We've done this before.'

Miss B., who says her farewell to her weekly show doesn't mean she'll never do a series again.

The future: after show No. 268, she will vacation with her producer-husband Joe Hamilton, and their three daughters, then make a CBS movie, The Grass I Always Greener Over the Septic Tank.

Then, she said, she will do another movie for director Robert Altman, for whom she acted last year in The Wedding. Then it is various specials, maybe a play, and maybe more CBS movies.

She reflected on her career, which took off when she began a four-year run in New York as a regular on CBS' Garry Moore Show.

"That was the first chapter, Garry and the New York days," she said softly. "The second chapter was out here on this show. And now I'm starting a third chapter. That's the way I look at it."

Surprise from Willie Joe

BURBANK (AP) — It surprised a few folks to learn that Willie Joe Namath, upon ending his 13-year career as a professional football quarterback, had signed to make an NBC comedy pilot called The Waverly Wonders.

Sure, he'd dabbled in acting. But most thought he'd go into sportcasting, or coaching, not playing a high school basketball coach in a television idea that could run a few weeks or more next season.

"Well, that's what we're hoping for," he said of the prospect of a long-run series. "We're doing this because we want to. And I like working. I'm the kind of person who's always got to be doing something."

Namath, 34, tanned and fit-looking, spoke during lunch at the studio where he's taping his pilot.

He said he has given thought to coaching pro or college football, but decided he lacks the kind of dedication needed to do justice to that line of work.

He's totally ruled out coaching, then?

"Yes," he said. Then, disgusted with the snap answer, he added: "Well, not totally. That's so dumb. How can I say totally? I don't know what the future's going to hold."

About sportcasting prospects, he would only say: "Maybe it'll come about in the future. Right now, we're set right here with the pilot.

"Hopefully, the people at NBC and across the country will like it. If they do, we'll do the series."

During his pro football years, 12 with the New York Jets, the last one with the Los Angeles Rams, Namath was known to say brash things now and then. That doesn't extend to his first season as a practising actor.

He has made three movies, C.C. and Co., Norwood, and The Last Rebel, and next month starts another one, Avalanche Express. But he readily admits he has a lot to learn in the emoting business.

"I never took an acting lesson until '71, after I'd done the first three movies, and recognized some of my deficiencies," he said. "I realized, 'Good Lord, everything I've done someone's taught me.'

"But no one taught me to act. So I started studying for three years in New York during the football season. Each year, I got a different teacher and studied voice, movement, improvision."

He grinned. "I know 18 months isn't a lot of studying . . . but it gave me a lot more confidence getting on stage, working with people. And I plan to study more, certainly, a heckuva lot more."

Elvis Night

A tribute to Elvis Presley will be held Sunday night at the Oak Bay Rec Centre's skating rink.

CKDA radio announcer Mike Gayle will host the Elvis night and distribute free Elvis albums and posters.

Admission is free for those dressed in 1950-style outfits and a hard-cover Elvis biography will be awarded for the best costume.

Cossitt Lambasts Liberals on Principle

OTTAWA (CP) — Tom Cossitt says he has nothing against the Liberal party personally, it's just that they're ruining the country.

With that explanation, the Progressive Conservative MP for Leeds brushes aside criticism that his recent string of allegations concerning possible Soviet espionage activities has done more harm than good.

Since abandoning the Liberal backrooms in 1972 over policy disputes such as the handling of the economy and implementation of bilingualism, Cossitt has become a persistent personal critic of Prime Minister Trudeau and his government.

"The general purpose of my questioning is to make sure the Canadian people know what's going on," he said in an interview. "I'm not irresponsible and I would hate to be characterized as such."

However, the MP from Brockville in eastern Ontario says the Liberals are determined to try and discredit his line of questioning by labelling him an alarmist and by charging he is undermining national security.

He says he began his attacks on Trudeau's spending habits because the prime minister "does not in any way practice what he preaches."

Cossitt has submitted hundreds of written questions asking for details of public expenditures at the two official residences of the prime minister, 24 Sussex Drive and a country cottage at Harrington Lake on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River.

And, he has zeroed in on rennovations to Trudeau's Parliament Hill offices as well as the cost of vacations taken by the prime minister on government aircraft.

The answers have revealed that hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars have been spent on repairs, rennovations and vacations since Trudeau assumed office nearly 10 years ago.

"I criticize him because I think he deserves it. He tells Canadians to lower their expectations and to expect a decline in their living standards. Then he spends thousands of dollars on furnishings, antiques, two Cadillacs and vacations," Cossitt says.

The MP insists he holds no personal grudge against Trudeau.

But he says the prime minister has been childish in his responses, choosing to stare at the wall, for example, when the two pass in a Commons corridor.

Cossitt says he bolted from the Liberal ranks after 25 years because the party had evolved into "Trudeau's party."

COSSITT
... no personal grudge

"I didn't change my political philosophy, it was the party that changed. I felt the Conservative party was espousing what the Liberls should have been doing."

He first became a federal candidate in the 1972 election, was re-elected in 1974, and has already been nominated as the party candidate for the coming election.

Regarded as a right-wing member of the party, he says his leader Joe Clark is usually aware in advance of his plans to question RCMP practices.

"I don't participate too much in caucus unless there's a particular issue that interests me. But my colleagues agree that I have not been proven wrong in any of my stances. I try to be responsible and say only what I know is based on fact."

Cossitt thinks his role as an espionage critic has evolved because his sources have confidence in him.

"I think people come to me because they know I will do something," adding that he always checks his information before releasing it.

Recently he has been after the KGB—the Soviet secret police—for allegedly infiltrating government and business circles.

"The country's lousy with them," he says flatly.

He says his sources are highly-placed in the RCMP security service and extend to the CIA in the U.S. and to West German intelligence circles.

The Conservative MP for Leeds has made a series of allegations recently concerning Soviet-backed terrorist activities in Canada.

GARDENING

Observe Before Planning

An observant gardener aiming at extending the range of benefits from having a garden soon is aware of the differences in not only soil conditions, but in weather and climate within a small area.

Moving around in Greater Victoria even as close-in as Royal Oak, Esquimalt, Ten Mile Point, Colwood and Elk Lake, the appearance of new growth or its lack offers interesting contrasts.

While the whole district has experienced a general earliness in plant growth, we notice this most in gardens and parks within the influence of salt water. Saxe Point Park with its pleasant background of native trees and shrubs was perhaps first in unfolding leaves of the native Indian-plum; flower clusters were fully extended in the first half of February. Orange-honeysuckle is running a close race in leaf growth and no doubt in flower bud formation. Golden broom flowers were seen there on New Year's Day with Beacon Hill Park running a race for first place.

In gardens the cultivated honeysuckles have been active since Feb. 1. If flowers coincide with humming bird arrivals we should be treated to a show of great activity by these visitors.

Daffodil observers have many types and varieties to contend with, for these respond to weather according to their genetic input.

In our own rather cold garden the species Narcissus lobularia showed well developed buds by Feb. 1 and color by Feb. 15. At Saanich Municipal Hall, a sunny sheltered corner near the steps from the public parking lot suddenly blossomed out with a fine display of King Alfred daffodils, better developed flowers than I have seen of this variety. Enquiry at the parks department disclosed that the bulbs had been potted for rooting and then gently forced into bloom with a little greenhouse heat. The result is lovely.

A bed of three pink varieties of winter heathers in another sunny spot is an inspiration for any home gardener to make more use of these easy-to-care-for plants for winter decoration.

Spring growth is less noticeable where the garden area is flat and has no sheltering background such as is noticed in our new housing areas. Daffs and tulips are just showing because of the mild temperatures but new growth at the base of perennials and leaf growth on new trees and shrubs is much less advanced.

Once the groundwork of a home garden is established, sheltered spots develop, making it possible to enjoy early growth as spring approaches and lingering blossoms as fall declines into winter.

This simply-stated fact extends to the need for establishing first in a new garden a shelter belt on a small scale. As the more spreading of these plants provide wind shelter, other slower growing shrubs and trees have a chance to become established. When they grow large enough to fulfill their purpose, the outer shelter may be either split up and transplanted to other vulnerable or less important areas or grubbed out for discarding.

As well as changing the soil to suit certain plants, it is also possible, within limits, to change the climate of a garden to suit the plants. Certainly it is possible to have early growth by trapping whatever sun warmth is available.

Reflected warmth from a light-colored background of wall or fence is valuable, too, but care must be used that such a situation is not given to broadleaved evergreen shrubs which will suffer foliage-burn during hot weather.

In summer the same spot would be ideal for flowering a shrub needing almost tropical heat, but it should not have broad leaves which would be damaged.

NOTICE
WHEREAS The Royal Trust Company, by its wholly owned subsidiary, Royal Trustco Limited, has caused to be incorporated by Letters Patent dated the 19th day of March, 1976 under the Trust Companies Act (Canada) as a subsidiary of Royal Trustco Limited, (wholly owned except for directors' qualifying shares), Royal Trust Corporation of Canada, for the purpose of taking over and carrying on certain of the business of The Royal Trust Company in the Province of British Columbia and other areas of Canada, with certain exceptions as herein described;
AND WHEREAS certain of the business of The Royal Trust Company in the Province of British Columbia have been transferred to Royal Trust Corporation of Canada;
AND WHEREAS The Royal Trust Company and Royal Trust Corporation of Canada desire to transfer the trusteeship business of The Royal Trust Company in British Columbia to Royal Trust Corporation of Canada;
AND WHEREAS because of the nature of the trusteeship business it is desirable to effect such transfer by Act of the Legislative Assembly:
NOTICE is hereby given that an application will be made to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of British Columbia at its next session, for an Act to effect the transfer of the trusteeship business of The Royal Trust Company in the Province of British Columbia to Royal Trust Corporation of Canada which Act shall contain provisions summarized as follows:
1. Subject to certain defined exceptions Royal Trust Corporation of Canada shall be substituted for The Royal Trust Company in every trust instrument of every kind in which The Royal Trust Company has been or shall be named as executor, administrator, trustee, bailee, committee, assignee, liquidator, receiver, guardian or curator or to any other office wherein property is vested in The royal Trust Company in trust for the benefit of any other person or persons.
2. Subject to certain defined exceptions all property held in trust by The Royal Trust Company for the benefit of any other person or persons shall be vested in Royal Trust Corporation of Canada and no registration or filing in any public office shall be necessary in respect of such vesting.
3. No suit, action, appeal, application or other proceeding by or against The Royal Trust Company shall be discontinued or abated on account of this Act but may be continued in the name of Royal Trust Corporation of Canada.
4. Any suit, action, appeal, application or other proceeding that might have been brought or exercised by or against The Royal Trust Company may be brought or exercised by or against Royal Trust Corporation of Canada.
5. Nothing in this Act affects the rights of any person having a claim against The Royal Trust Company but such claim may be asserted against Royal Trust Corporation of Canada.
6. Exceptions to the substitution and vesting under this Act are:
(a) Property under trust instruments by virtue of which bonds, debentures, warrants or rights are issued.
(b) Property held in mutual funds, pooled funds, pension plans, unit trusts, registered retirement savings plans and registered home-ownership savings plans.
(c) Property held in trust where the trust is administered outside the Province of British Columbia.

Cook Didn't Face This!

For Victoria assistant city manager Colin Crisp this may be the summer of his greying.

The young administrator is one of the key members of the Greater Victoria committee charged with steering the four core municipalities through a summer of Captain Cook bicentennial festivities.

If Crisp doesn't turn grey at least he can expect to wilt a little, for there are some rough seas ahead.

Imagine, for instance, having the Inner Harbor jammed with sailing craft from all over the world — and then trying to maintain order while the Black Ball ferry, the Princess Marguerite and AirWest floatplanes all try to stay on schedule.

The ingredients of chaos are there, Crisp admitted to the Central Business Advisory Committee Tuesday, but his fingers are crossed, if not his toes.

Other worries include the problem of handling the crowds wanting to board the five class A tall ships (250,000 people tried to get aboard one day at a similar festival in the Baltic); where to find 7,000 women to dance with the 7,000 sailors who will be here as part of a six-nation naval revue, and how to insure that the tall ships all arrive on the same day. The ships are racing here from Hawaii.

One committee member wanted to know about parking arrangements for the crowds.

Crisp replied that parking is on the problem list, but no estimates on the magnitude of the traffic and parking problem had yet been worked out.

Crisp said it is difficult to complete any plans at the moment as the exact count on the number of ships taking part won't be known for another month.

To date five tall ships are committed, about 45 class B sailing vessels, 10 B1, and 27 navy ships. And hundreds of private craft are expected to arrive from throughout the Pacific Northwest.

Crisp said as many of the sailing craft as possible will be moored in the Inner Harbor to create maximum visual impact, but the tall ships will have to be berthed at Ogden Point.

Private vessels will be allowed to tie up in the harbor when room permits, but Crisp said many ships will be sent to Oak Bay, Brentwood, or wherever there's space.

Crisp added that at least there's one headache he won't be having anymore.

"I'm assured by the fire chief that it is possible to have a fireworks display on the west side of the harbor without blowing up the (oil) tanks over there."

Students To Air Problems

Students from 19 Greater Victoria high schools will meet at a day-long conference Saturday to discuss their common educational problems.

MLA Charles Barber (NDP-Victoria) and school-board superintendent Allan Stables will be guest speakers.

Topics for discussion include student involvement in school activities, objectives of a student government, fund-raising methods and the ideal student council.

Opening ceremonies begin at 9:30 a.m.

Civil Suit To Settle Gambling

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Distribution of about $24,000 in cash, an exhibit in a recent gambling trial in this northern British Columbia community, will be determined by civil litigation in B.C. Supreme Court, provincial court judge J. H. Kenney ruled.

The money, seized from Ernie Chow at the Chee Duck Tong Society, was ordered returned Feb. 14 to its owners by Kenney.

At a hearing Monday, Judge Kenney ruled that the gambling devices seized at the same time as the money, marked cards, dice, magnets, and other paraphenalia, be forfeited.

No date has been set for the civil action.

The money was given to Chow, who acted as a banker at the gambling club, by unnamed citizens who are claiming it. Several hundred dollars also belonged to Chow.

Chow was found guilty and fined $2,000 Jan. 18 for keeping devices for gambling and having in his possession money and cheques relating to an illegal transaction.

Asylum Refused

LIMA (AFP) — Six Peruvians asked the British Embassy for political asylum Monday but were turned down. Plainsclothes police arrested them when they left the embassy.

The two men, one woman and three children, on a hunger strike to demand rehiring of 5,000 fired Peruvian workers, had occupied offices at the embassy. An embassy spokesman said they left the building voluntarily.

ALI BACKS BANGLADESH

DACCA (Reuter) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali said Wednesday he would fight in future as a Bangladesh citizen.

Ali, who lost his crown to Leon Spinks last week in Las Vegas, left for London after a five-day goodwill visit to Bangladesh during which he was made an honorary citizen last Saturday by president Ziaur Rahman.

Before leaving, Ali was appointed honorary consul-general for Bangladesh in Chicago, and given a Bangladesh passport and letter of appointment by the president-adviser on foreign affairs.

"I will now represent Bangladesh everywhere. I'll fly a Bangladesh flag in my house, in my new office at Chicago and in my car," Ali told reporters, adding: "In my next fight to regain my title, I want the world press to introduce me as a citizen of Bangladesh"

Ali described Bangladesh, one of the world's poorest countries, as a paradise and said he would build a house at a Bangladesh sea resort and live there two months a year.

He said he had earned $59 million since he became a professional boxer, but did not want more.

"God has given me enough. What shall I do with more of it? I will have to die one day. I can't take all my money in the grave and build a heaven there," Ali said.

He said he would retire and become an evangelist to help the world understand Islam.

'Open' U Pleases Petch

University of Victoria president Dr. Howard Petch views the plan to set up an open university system in British Columbia in a more positive light than some of his contemporaries at other universities.

Commenting on the announcement last week by Education Minister Pat McGeer, Petch said Tuesday it is difficult to pass any real judgment until some of the details of the program have been spelled out.

But he added: "We are hoping he will develop it further. We would like to explore with him the role the University of Victoria can play in delivering such programs up-Island and to the Interior.

"We think there is an important role for the universities to play."

McGeer announced that by the fall, residents would receive courses similar to a British program being delivered to 75,000 students at an estimated cost of $60 million a year. He said the courses would be delivered by television and radio.

In some quarters, the statement was received with a marked lack of enthusiasm.

Pauline Jewett, president of Simon Fraser University, said McGeer "hasn't any idea of what is entailed in such a project."

Richard Roydhouse, University of B.C. Faculty Association president, said the McGeer plan caused him to "roll on the floor with laughter."

But Petch said while there will be a number of problems to iron out, he believes it is feasible to contemplate a fall start for the open university concept — at least with a limited offering of courses.

"There are ways we could get some things under way. For example, we have been developing courses in nursing, social work and public administration for delivery at a distance. They (McGeer's program) might provide the delivery system for our courses."

He said if the program were starting from scratch the cost would be enormous, but presumably significant economies could be made through adapting the basic British program to North American requirements.

One of the biggest tasks, he predicted, would be to restructure that country's social science courses — many of which are oriented toward the United Kingdom or Africa — to make them suitable for B.C. consumption.

In defending the open university program Tuesday, McGeer said the criticism expressed so far is unwarranted and comes only from self-interested university officials.

"We're not doing it for them (the universities). We're doing it for the people of the province — the students and particularly the mature students," the minister said.

"The Open Learning Institute will be the greatest advance in education in British Columbia in the century," he said. "Mark my words on that."

Pickets Ignored

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia will continue normal operations despite the setting up of picket lines by the university's operating engineers, U.B.C. president Doug Kenny said Tuesday.

The 25 engineers, members of local 882 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, walked out after negotiations for a new contract broke down over an arbitration issue.

"We feel our total offer is an equitable one," said Kenny. "It is a fair offer, and it is the upper limits of what the anti-inflation board would allow."

He said the university offer would give the engineers total increases of between $1,085 and $1,437 in 1978. The engineer's contract with the university expired Dec. 31.

PRISON PLAN 'IRRESPONSIBLE'

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of the national capital region Civil Liberties Association called today for a halt to the five-year prison construction program, which he called an irresponsible waste of money.

Don Whiteside announced formation of a Moratorium Committee on Prison Construction which he described as an association of concerned individuals and citizens' groups.

The committee also condemned the federal government's failure to implement the 65 recommendations of the parliamentary subcommittee on prisons. The recommendations, tabled in the Commons last June, called for drastic reform of the penitentiary system.

Brad Morse, a University of Ottawa law professor who is also on the moratorium committee, said, "we simply cannot understand why they are choosing to devote such a large amount of resources to building new institutions rather than to keeping people out of jail in the first place."

He said the money should be used for widespread prison reform, diversion and restitution programs and community work service as alternatives to sending people to jail.

The new prisons will have 4,712 beds, replacing 1,386 beds in old institutions, he said. This leaves a surplus of 3,326 beds.

Morse called this new space "a self-fulfilling prophesy. Once you have these new institutions, they will be filled. The courts will continue to send people there."

He criticized the government for assuming that the prison population will continue to increase. He estimated it costs more than $25,000 a year to keep one person in prison.

Ottawa To Borrow To Save Dollar

Import Costs Zoom 25%

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Only a day after telling the Commons the Canadian dollar's value would be set in the "marketplace," Finance minister Jean Chretien Tuesday night announced a rescue operation to bolster the sagging currency by borrowing abroad.

Chretien gave no figures on the government's borrowing intentions in a terse, four-paragraph statement, saying: "The borrowing plan is now being arranged and details will be announced later."

The planned foreign borrowing is a signal to currency speculators and foreign exchange markets that Ottawa intends to support the dollar against further devaluation.

The minister also said that as "an interim step in advance" of the foreign borrowing, the government will be drawing on $1.5 billion in standby credit arranged with Canadian chartered banks last October.

In New York, foreign exchange traders gave a mixed reception today to the Canadian government's decision to intervene in support of the sagging Canadian dollar.

"I think it's wonderful — and about time," said a senior trader at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company. "In the long run, it is going to do a lot of good."

"It's nothing new," commented a trader in the New York branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. "They have been in and out of the market all along with small amounts. It will tend to hold the dollar but I don't think it is going to go very high."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Merchandise entering Canada from the United States, Japan and most European countries is costing importers as much as 25 per cent more than a year ago at the wholesale level, mainly due to the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar.

That means consumers will be, and in some case already are, paying higher prices for imported commodities.

The fall of the Canadian dollar, combined with the stnregthening value of the Japanese yen, has resulted in a major price increase at the wholesale level on Japanese cameras, said store owner Steve Good.

"Last fall we were buying a Minolta SRT-200 for $176 and retailing it for $199," he said. "As of Feb. 1 our cost for the same camera is $235. We're paying more for that camera than we were selling it for and the magic $200 plateau for a single-lens reflex no longer exists."

The Japanese-built Honda Accord, the most sought-after import automobile in North America, went up $400 three weeks ago and now sells for $5,800, say local car dealers.

Lakehill Trading owner Frank Warburton paid $33 wholesale six months ago for a heavy-knit British woolen sweater. It now costs about $37 because of reversing values of the Canadian dollar and the British pound, he said.

"We have to lay aside 10 per cent more money to pay the increase in import prices," said Michael Farges, of Far-Met Importers, which handles gourmet foods and cheeses.

Farges said a pound of Swiss gruyere cheese cost him $2.10 to import a year ago. Today's import price is $2.80. That same amount of cheese sold for $3 a year ago and now retails for $3.98, he said.

Dave Spurrell, president of the 400-member Vancouver Wine Club, said a case of Schloss Vollrads white wine from the German Rheingau Estate cost him about $60 to import a year ago and now costs $84.

The drop in the Canadian dollar during the last year has been 9.3 per cent against the U.S. dollar, 47 per cent against the Swiss franc, 31 per cent against the Japanese yen, 28 per cent against the West German mark and 20 per cent against the British pound.

Where's Police Woman?

Police Woman might be a hit TV show but the Victoria police department is having trouble finding women who want to play the role in real life.

Deputy Chief Les Mottershead told the Victoria Police Board today a recent advertising campaign in local newspapers had brought 24 job applications — but only one from a woman.

With only one woman constable now on the force, the department is eager to recruit females.

But because of human rights legislation it is restricted in its advertising approach to the problem.

Mottershead said that due to fears that the department might be accused of sexism in its advertising, the ads have shown pictures of both policemen and policewomen and the positions are listed for "police personnel".

Mayor Mike Young said he'll write to the provincial government complaining that because of current human rights legislation "we're unable to run the ad we want to."

British Still Digging

TAUNTON, England (AP) — Blizzards that left snow drifts up to 30 feet deep in parts of southwest England have claimed at least seven lives, police reported Tuesday.

Police said more persons may have died trying to dig out of snowed-in homes or escape from trapped cars in the rural area's worst winter weather decades.

Rescue operations and helicopter searches have been hampered by blocked roads and fog, police said.

Rain and the start of a thaw due to slightly rising temperatures has brought the additional hazard of flooding. Kingsbridge in the south of Devon County suffered floods Tuesday and a county water authority spokesman said: "We are already preparing for serious flooding if the thaw is fast."

Most roads in Devonshire and the counties of Somerset, Dorset and northeast Cornwall remained blocked by snow, which first started falling late last week.

Denis Howell, the government minister responsible for co-ordinating emergency operations, announced in this Somerset County town that army units were being moved in to help with road clearing.

Southwest Wales and southern Scotland also have been badly hit by heavy snow and many roads in the two areas remain blocked.

Helicopter crews who have been dropping food to isolated farms and scores of cut-off villages, as well as searching for trapped motorists, said fog was hampering their work.

THREE STATES HARD HIT

Power, Jobs Cut By Coal Strike

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Officials of Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia announced Tuesday the first in what is feared may become a series of widespread power cutbacks, while layoffs forced by the U.S. coal strike mounted to almost 3,000 in Indiana.

The affects of the cutback in the three states was not immediately determined.

One explanation was that power sharing and conservation are helping stretch dwindling coal stocks.

Another was that officials from several states near the Appalachian coalfields are trying to co-ordinate cutbacks, which they said remained imminent.

The attempts at co-ordination involved parts of Ohio, Kentucky and Pennsylvania, as well as Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. It was not clear what affect the three-state cutback will have on the others.

But in Indiana, 2,900 layoffs were reported this week in Terre Haute, Kokomo, Peru and Anderson, in addition to 530 layoffs for two days last week in Anderson. The numbers are expected to increase, with coal stocks at two big Indiana utilities below the 40-day point at which they must order industry to cut back usage 25 per cent.

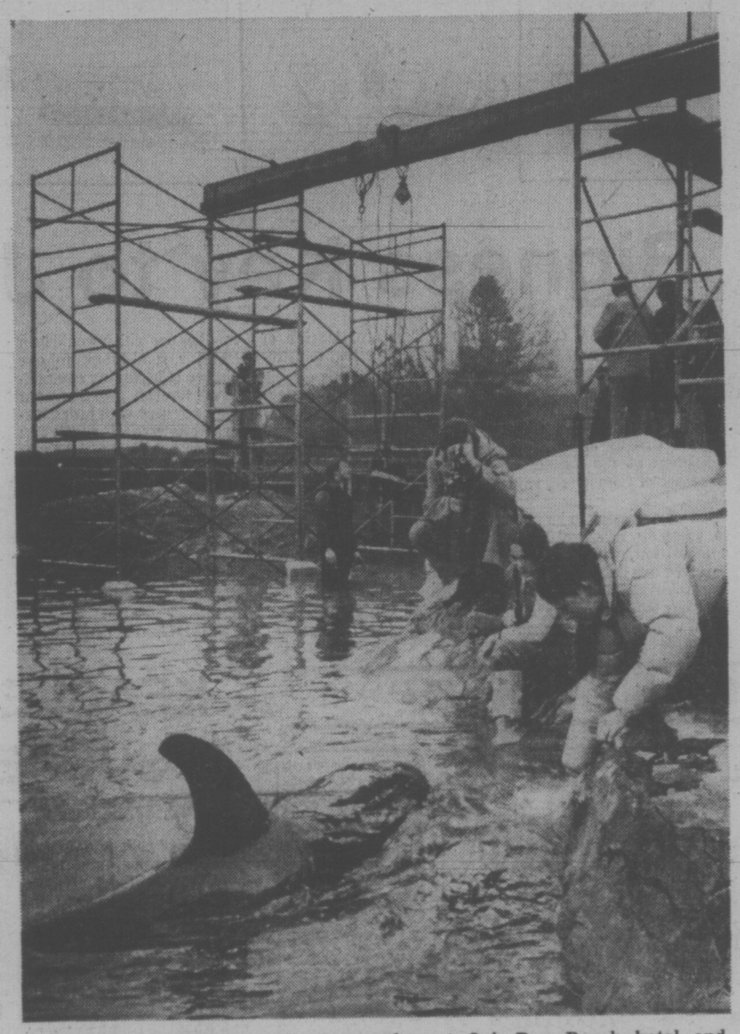

In Ohio, Akron-based Ohio Edison Co., serving 800,000 customers in central and northern Ohio, said it was three days above the 30-day coal stock level at which it will impose 50 per cent cutbacks on industry.

In West Virginia, the state Public Service Commission had been scheduled to impose 30 per cent curtailments Monday — from which some 25,000 layoffs were expected. But Gov. Jay Rockefeller had objected and the PSC suspended its order.

In Pennsylvania, where no layoffs were reported, Gov. Milton Shapp asked President Carter to declare an energy emergency that would allow suspension of pollution regulations.

Meanwhile, the U.S. coal industry today called for voluntary binding arbitration in the strike as negotiators for the two sides held last-chance talks in hopes of avoiding a government-imposed end to the dispute.

The industry said binding arbitration is "preferable to the loss which the economy is now suffering."

MIRACLE MEDICAL took place today at Oak Bay Beach hotel and examiners pronounced killer whale in good shape for helicopter trip to new pool at Sealand next week. Mammal has put on about 450 pounds since her arrival and now weighs a whopping 1,250 pounds. Whale has had 32 medicals since Aug. 12 and tender loving treatment for a variety of problems, including a gunshot wound. (John McKay photo)

UIC Being Cheated By Municipalities?

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Municipalities are the latest unemployment insurance cheats to be identified.

J.L. Manion, chairman of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, which administers the unemployment insurance program, admitted to the Commons public accounts committee Tuesday that the commission was suspicious of a pattern that appears to exist among some municipalities in different provinces.

He wouldn't name any offenders but said they hire individuals, who otherwise would be going on welfare, to do menial public works chores for the minimum qualifying period for unemployment benefits.

In this year, he said, the municipalities avoid paying out welfare money later on. the cost of supporting the people involved is carried by the unemployment insurance program.

Manion refused to call the practice "a sham transaction," when urged to do so by Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West), who said he has known about the practice since 1971, when the eligibility period was reduced to eight weeks. It is now 10 to 14 weeks.

Manion told reporters at the conclusion of the hearing that a "rip-off against any public program is a rip-off against all of us."

Unemployment insurance is a contributory scheme in which the federal government, employers and employees participate.

Welfare payments, generally, are split three ways among municipalities, the provinces and the federal government, under provisions of the Canada Assistance Plan.

The practice could occur wherever there is an enterprising welfare administrator interested in or under orders to reduce welfare costs, Manion said.

He said most of the "evidence the commission has is "anecdotal" because it is hard to pin down actual cases.

The ministry likes to assure all the circumstances and hardships faced by a client are considered before charges are laid.

"But on the other hand we are not putting up with any nonsense from those who wilfully cheat the system."

Welfare Probes Net $2M

Human resources inspectors investigated 3,650 alleged welfare frauds last year and laid 354 charges resulting in an annual savings of $2 million, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today.

Recoveries ordered or agreed to amounted to $379,000.

In addition, another $164,000 in monthly welfare payments were terminated.

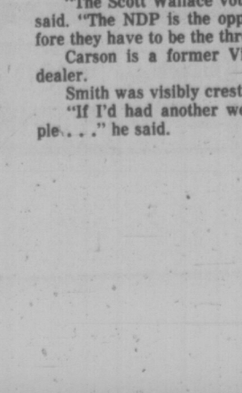

Vander Zalm said that of the 3,650 cases, 1,433 are still under investigation.

The fraud cases have involved up to $30,000 from a single recipient with the majority being in the $1,000 range.

He said there has been evidence in some cases of organized fraud, but the most prevalent problem has been common-law relationships where one spouse is earning an income.

Vander Zalm said in most cases the ministry simply arranges for repayment of funds or terminates continuing benefits rather than taking people to court.

"For the most part, we only proceed with charges for flagrant violations of the system," he said.

Ottawa Wins Battle, Keable Probe Closed

MONTREAL (CP) — The Trudeau government emerged the victor Tuesday in its battle to shift the spotlight off the Keable commission's dogged efforts to expose RCMP wrongdoing.

The break came, after four successive court defeats for Ottawa, when the Quebec Court of Appeal shut down the provincial commission with an order that is unlikely to be lifted for many months—if at all.

The three-man appeals tribunal ordered Commissioner Jean Keable to halt all proceedings and to turn all documentation over to Quebec Superior Court within 15 days.

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, who inherited the court fight from Francis Fox earlier this month, said in Ottawa, "That's exactly what we wanted . . . I'm elated by that decision."

Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard, acting on Keable's recommendation, announced within hours of the ruling he would take the case before the Supreme Court of Canada.

"The solicitor-general of Canada," Bedard said in Quebec City, "has succeeded for the moment in paralysing the work of an inquiry commission into certain criminal acts and into the actions and

BOY OVERBOARD FLOATS TWO DAYS

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — A 14-year-old Indian boy who fell overboard on a voyage home from China stayed afloat for two days in the Indian Ocean, a government announcement said today.

The Norwegian ship Toleda picked him up on Feb. 4 about 370 kilometres (200 nautical miles) south of Sri Lanka and landed him at Port Said in Egypt.

The boy, identified only as D'Netto of Bombay, remained afloat with a life preserver after he fell overboard Feb. 2.

He was travelling with his parents on the Indian ship Damodar, which was returning to Goa, south of Bombay.

Carson Wins, Says NDP Toughest

Oak Bay Social Credit candidate Frank Carson says the NDP will be his toughest opponent in the March 20 byelection in Oak Bay.

Carson, who defeated Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith for the nomination Tuesday night, said the Conservatives aren't his biggest concern because that party's vote in Oak Bay has been a Scott Wallace vote.

Former Tory leader Wallace resigned his seat Dec. 31, creating the byelection in the constituency.

"The Scott Wallace vote is not transferable," Carson said. "The NDP is the opposition in this province, therefore they have to be the threat."

Carson is a former Victoria aldermen and is a car dealer.

Smith was visibly crestfallen.

"If I'd had another week to call on another 100 people. . . ." he said.

Of the 2,700 registered Socreds in Oak Bay, 1,521 attended the convention in the Racquet Club.

"I guess he (Carson) did a better job getting his people out to the meeting," Smith said.

The exact vote is not known because of a Socred nominating policy not to reveal the count to give the impression of unanimity in candidate selection.

But several insiders said the difference was between 100 and 200 votes.

The Socreds were the last party to name their candidate for the byelection.

The Liberals have chosen Graham Ross-Smith, the Tories have brought in their new leader Vic Stephens, the NDP nominated Bennett Camp and Larry Tickner is running for the Socialist Party of Canada.

The crowd jammed almost every available room in the Racquet Club.

When the main floor was filled, the lounges and cafeteria were used with delegates viewing the proceedings on the convention floor via closed-circuit telvision.

Carson told the delegates a socialist threat still exists and the the NDP is continuing to make encroachments at the municipal level in the riding.

He said paid NDP researcher John Mika, who is a Saanich alderman, managed to get elected in mid-term to the Capital Regional District board without running one ad in the newspapers.

Carson, who was nominated by former Oak Bay Social Credit candidate Howie McDiarmid, asked the delegates to vote for him and let him finish the job he started in 1975 when he opposed Wallace and came second.

Smith also mentioned the NDP as the main opposition and said a recent poll on Vancouver Island shows 37 per cent support for the NDP compared to 25 per cent for the Socreds.

Balance of Power Eyed By NDP

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ed Broadbent, federal New Democratic Party leader, said Tuesday he expects, as a minimum, to hold the balance of power in the House of Commons after the next federal election.

And he promised the NDP would perform better than it did when it supported the minority Liberal party government after the 1972 election.

"We would try to work out a long-range program rather than the last time, when we went pretty well from day to day," he said. "The program would have to contain a good measure of NDP campaign promises."

Broadbent made the comments at a party meeting in Winnipeg North constituency. Sitting MP David Orlikow was chosen by acclamation to run as the NDP candidate in the next election.

In the 1972 election, the NDP's 31 members in the Commons unofficially sided with the Liberals. Prime Minister Trudeau's government regained its majority in the 1974 election.

Broadbent said he believes another election will come within the next few months.

"I'm looking forward to the battle more than I have looked forward to anything in my life.

"The polls are moving in the right direction, the party is moving in the right direction, and I hope after the election the country will be moving in the right direction."

Broadbent said the main issue in the campaign will be unemployment. The NDP will "drive home the relevence of social democracy" to current economic conditions in Canada.

The NDP leader spoke earlier in the day to a seminar on human resources at which he criticized the recent federal-provincial economic summit conference for failing to formulate specific programs to fight unemployment and boost the ailing economy.

Seven-Ounce Baby

JAKARTA (AFP) — A "miniature" premature baby, weighing only 200 grams (seven ounces) at birth three weeks ago is today reported to be doing well after doctors predicted that she would only live a few days.

The baby girl, born to a woman seven months pregnant in Ngimingan Village, central Java, now weighs 600 grams (one pound 5 oz.) and appears to be healthy in all respects, the Nationalist Merdeka Daily newspaper reported.

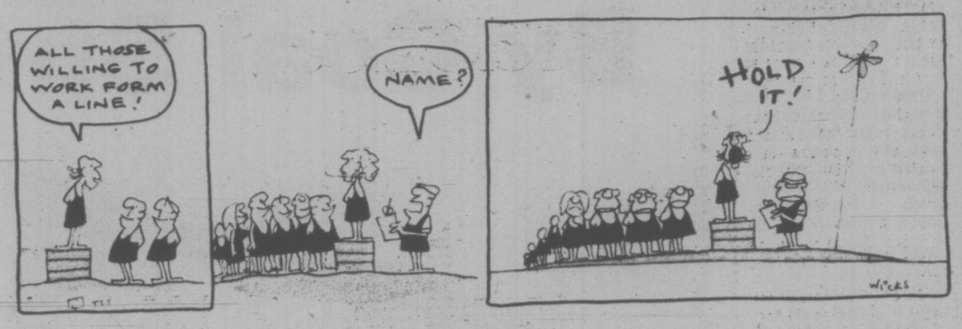

LICENCES SATURDAY

Drivers will be able to buy their 1978 auto insurance at the motor vehicle branch Saturday.

The office will be open Saturday from 8:30 to 5 p.m. for all services except driver examinations.

Bigness Key to Jobs?

FREDERICTON (CP) — Lack of Canadian competitiveness in world trade is the real cause of unemployment and declining productivity is a major part of the difficulty, Harold Crosby of Halifax, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said today.

"If we are going to be able to compete in world-class competition, with low unit costs, we are going to have to start thinking about re organizing our industry into larger units with more specialization and rationalization of production," he told the Fredericton chamber.

"We cannot afford the tendency to think that bigness is bad in principle, as is fashionable in some quarters."

Crosby said the problem is that "the minute we start thinking in terms of reorganizations such as mergers, joint ventures and specialization agreements, we run into resistance from government policies and legislation."

He cited the competition bill currently before parliament as one which would be a "major road-block to our chance of becoming competitive" through creation of a bureaucracy with broad discretionary and arbitrary powers to regulate business and industry. It might well discourage expansion.

Crosby cited figures showing that Canadian productivity grew an average 2.7 per cent annually from 1960 to 1965, 1.9 per cent from 1965 to 1970 and .9 per cent from 1970 to 1975.

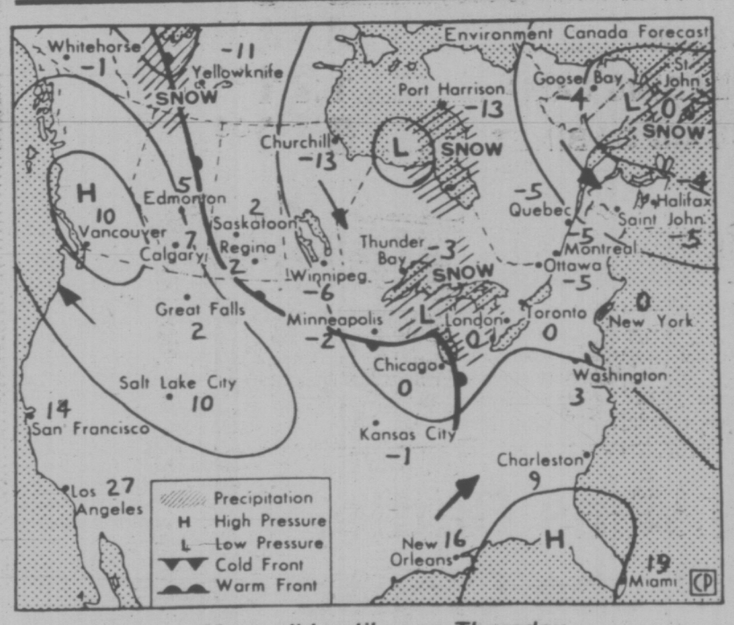

"In 1977, the estimate is that productivity actually declined."

Labor productivity was only one part of that picture, he said. But, in 1975, in manufacturing, output per worker in Canada was 20 per cent lower than in the United States and labor costs were 10 per cent higher.

"This meant that our unit labor costs were roughly one third higher than in the U.S."

Capital productivity was even worse in the same industry by comparison with the U.S.

the weather

Map valid until noon Thursday

The cloudy mild weather of the past few days seems to be coming to an end. The last in the present series of Pacific systems has reached the coast and will clear British Columbia tonight or early Thursday. The conditions of fog, rain and drizzle will give way to clearing skies as a ridge of high pressure builds over British Columbia from the west. Temperatures will be a little lower but still near or just above the long term averages for late February.

KEABLE PROBE SUSPENDED

behavior of policemen which have imperilled, and probably still do, the individual rights and freedoms of Quebec citizens.

"I cannot accept this situation, nor the Canadian government's interpretation of the federal constitution."

Premier Rene Levesque described the ruling as "very unfortunate" and a blow to the commission's effort to protect individual liberties.

Keable, a 31-year-old labor lawyer from Quebec City whose name has become a household word in the province, showed no visible signs of disappointment when the decision was relayed to the inquiry, but made a quick exit after announcing that "hearings are adjourned for an undetermined period."

Federal lawyers meanwhile shook hands and hugged each other.

A commission source said it is likely to take at least two months before the appeal is heard, but observers estimated the commission would be shut down until the fall—probably until after the impending federal election.

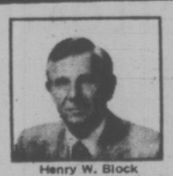

If the Supreme Court treats it as "an emergency case," the appeal could be processed by the end of the year, an RCMP lawyer said.

In his 38-page majority opinion, Mr. Justice Rodolph Pare wrote: "In short, the dispute with which this commission is seized opposes the provincial executive power to the federal exceutive power and I do not see why the latter should be subjected to the former."

The ruling took Blais off the hook for failing to obey an order to appear personally before the commission last week.

It also came just in time to prevent the appearance of another former solicitor-general, Jean-Pierre Goyer.

the devaluation accelerated this week after a steady decline over the last 15 months from an exchange rate of $1.03 U.S. in November 1976.

While pressure on the Canadian dollar has resulted from a decline in both the Canadian and U.S. currencies, foreign exchange rates are a reflection on the slack Canadian economy — nine per cent inflation, 8.3 per cent unemployment and an estimated $5 billion annual deficit on foreign transactions.

Conservative MP Jim Gillies, a former economics professor, termed the planned foreign borrowing "a tragic commentary on the economic condition of the country."

Gillies said that if the borrowing fails to halt the decline of the dollar, the next step would be borrowing from the International Monetary Fund, which could demand a say in Canada's economic policies as a condition.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent, reached by telephone in Winnipeg, said: "The action is overdue to bolster the dollar."

"As a short term answer," he added, "the action reflects the terrible state of the Canadian economy."

Broadbent said the borrowing is only a stop-gap measure and that the government must move rapidly to restore financial credibility.

Earlier in the Commons, Chretien said none of the standby credit with Canadian banks had been called.

On Monday, the minister replied with a catergorical "no" when asked by Conservative leader Joe Clark whether it was "the intention of the government to draw o the standby credit in the foreseeable future."

However, Chretien told the Commons Tuesday that the Bank of Canada had "intervened" in foreign money markets "to maintain orderly market conditions."

Chretien revealed no further details about the central bank's action.

Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens told the House that the Bank of Canada had spent approximately $500 million of the country's foreign currency reserves in February buying Canadian dollars to bolster the cirrency's value.

Earlier Tuesday, a private economic research group said the government should not count on the devaluation of Canada's dollar as a permanent solution to the country's trade ills

The Conference Board in Canada said in a paper that growing deficits in manufactured goods, future large shortfalls in oil and gas trade, increasing deficits in service payments and the impact of negotiations aimed at freer world trade will all have adverse impacts on the country's economic future.

Many of the country's current economic problems are cyclical, or recurring, in nature but there is evidence of longer term alterations that could have a significant impact and cause future troubles, the study says.

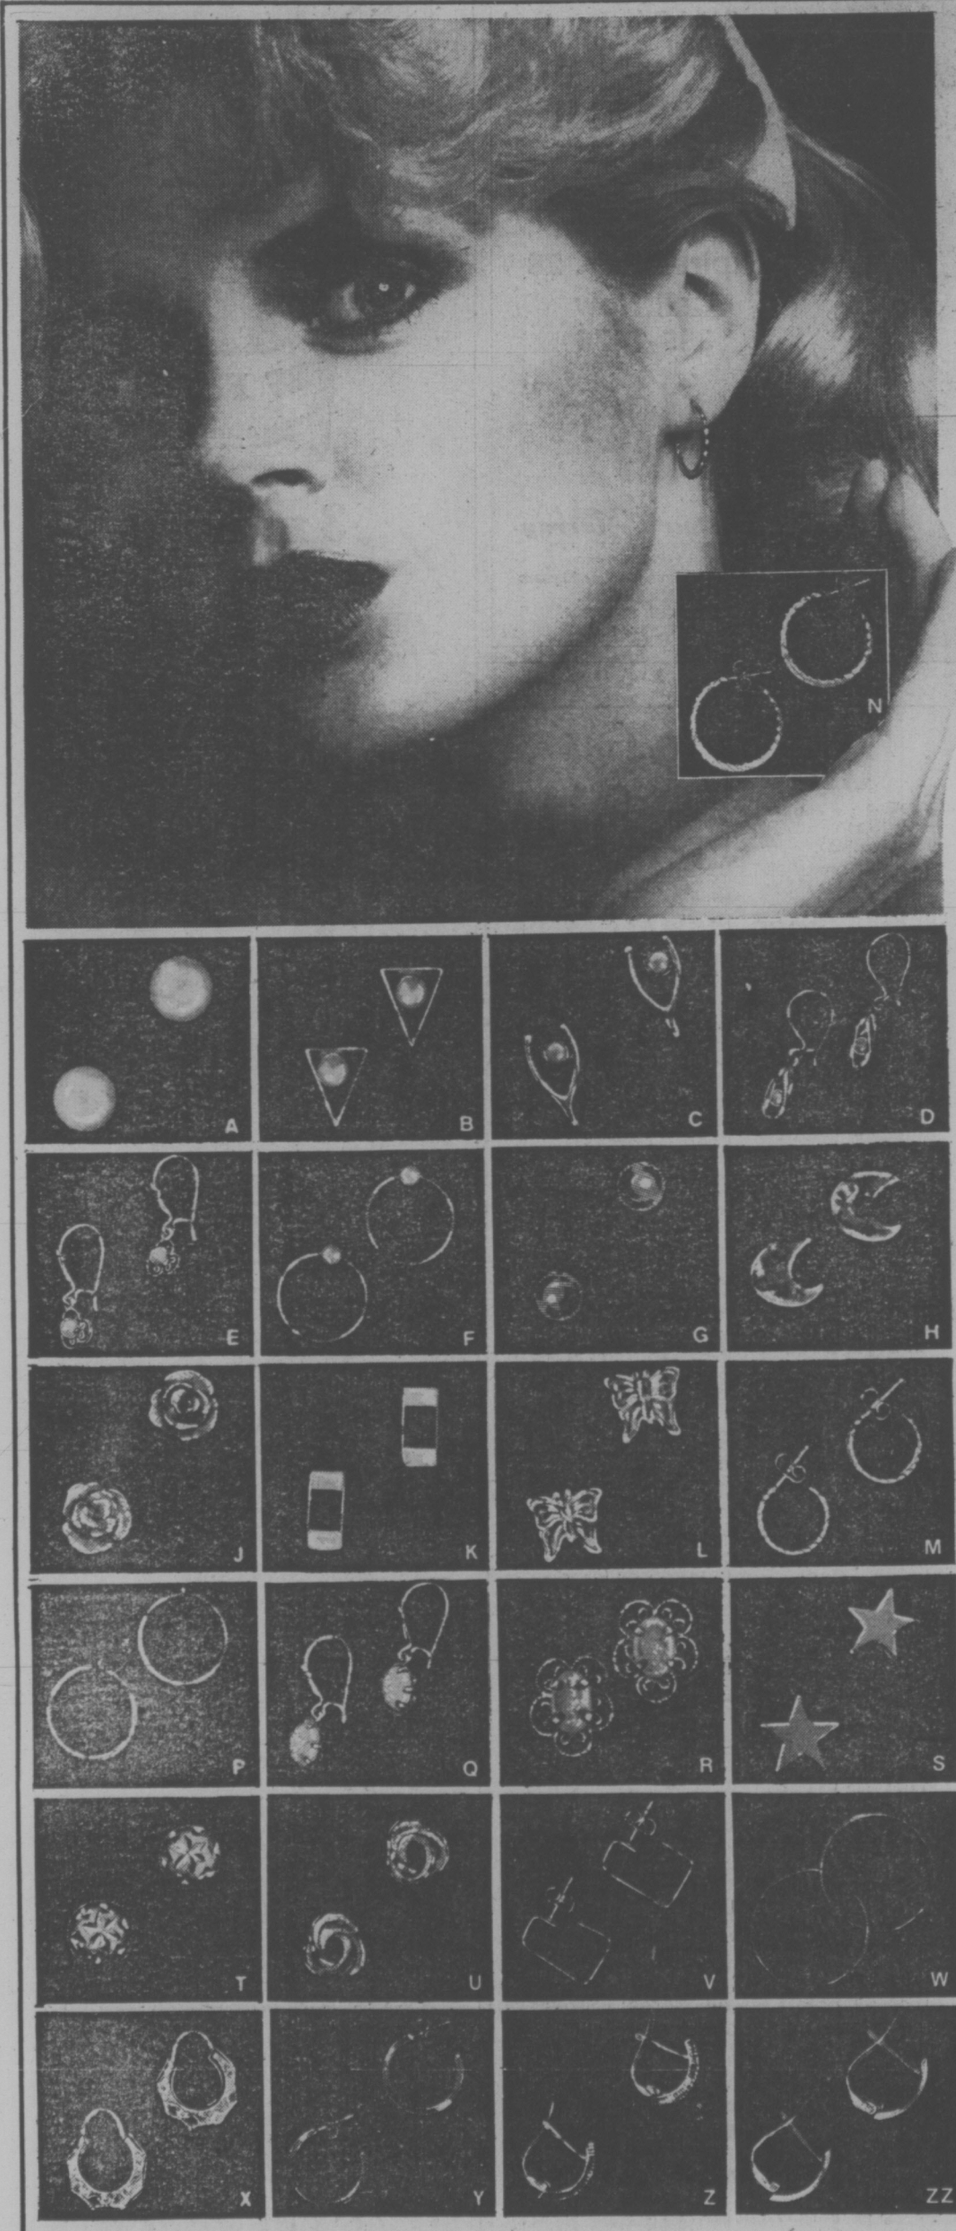

The conference board, a non-profit independent agency including business, labor and government representatives, says its paper was prepared in an effort to untangle the cyclical from the long-term trends.

Currency reserve figures for February are to be published next week.

Islanders Resisting 'Stepping Stone' Role

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Residents of Lasqueti Island, a normally tranquil retreat in Georgia Strait just northeast of Parksville, are beginning to make noise.

Since late last year they have been meeting, talking and asking a lot of questions about a B.C. Hydro proposal which could see their island used as a stepping stone for a transmission line between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

"We are going to continue to cause trouble, mostly in the form of asking a lot of questions," island resident Kevin Monahan said in an interview.

"We will continue until we feel we're satisfied."

Right now the 250 residents of the island feel there are too many unanswered questions about the $350-million project to provide twin 500-kilovolt (kv) transmission lines between Squamish on the mainland and a substation near Qualicum Beach on Vancouver Island.

They are concerned about the possible effects of a 660-foot-wide transmission line right of way across their homes, gardens, farms, fields and forests.

They want to know why Hydro can't just splice the line around Lasqueti, a proposal the islanders say wouldn't cost any more.

They want to know what the effects will be on their surface water supply if Hydro continues its present practice of spraying herbicides in order to keep rights of way clear.

And there are the more general questions that other environmental groups and opposition political parties are asking.

For example, does Vancouver Island really need the extra power that will be provided and are there sufficient controls on Hydro's development plans?

Opponents of the project have called for a two-year moratorium until unanswered questions are dealt with and other alternatives are studied.

Meanwhile, Hydro presses on, resolved that the line must go in.

The Crown corporation has had and will continue to have public meetings on the proposal but its position is that alternatives for providing extra power to the Island have been studied and the proposed line is the most economic and secure way of providing what's needed.

Hydro's engineers and planners don't feel that an alternative can be found and put in place in time to deal with forecasted load growth.

"It's our responsiblity to have the power there when people need it," said one Hydro spokesman.

Hydro commissioned Beak Consultants Ltd. of Vancouver to conduct an investigative study of the proposed route. The first report was released last October and the second volume, dealing with the underwater sections of the line from the Sunshine Coast to Dunsmuir substation on Vancouver Island near Qualicum Beach, is expected this summer.

The first volume said the demand for electrical power on the Island has almost doubled in the last 10 years.

The peak load now is about 1,000 megawatts and the forecast is for that demand to rise to 1,535 by 1983 when the first circuit is scheduled to be completed, to 1,720 by 1986-87 when the second circuit is to be operating and to 2,260 by 1,990-91.

Opponents say when the two 500 Kv circuits are completed in 1986 they will provide 2,200 million watts, raising Vancouver Island's peak load capability to 3,825 million watts, about four times the present peak load.

This is far in excess of Hydro's own forecast of power requirements, the opponents say.

But Hydro spokesman Dave Robertson says just because the line is capable of handling so many million watts doesn't mean that much power will be there all the time.

"There won't be kilovolts dancing around unused," he said, adding that the power just won't be generated at source if it is not needed. But the capability is there for handling future development on the Island.

He said the circuit completion dates are still 1983 for the first circuit and 1986 for the second. But these could be altered, he said, if there are dramatic changes in the load requirements or other problems arise.

Land clearing on the route from Squamish to Nelson Island, about 20 miles northwest of Sechelt on the mainland, will begin toward the end of this year and will have to be completed by October, 1980.

In the meantime, Hydro is waiting for Beak's second report which will deal with the underwater portion of the route.

Other 500kv underground cables have been installed elsewhere and are operating successfully but Hydro's would be the first to go underwater.

Beak said in the first report that the reason a second study is necessary is because more data and oceanographic studies are required on the underwater route.

"There is uncertainty about the technical feasibility of some of the submarine corridor sections."

The submarine portion would be made up of seven cables - six in service and one spare - which will be filled with oil under pressure.

The report did recommend a preferred corridor between the Cheekeye substation near Squamish and the Sunshine Coast, saying it will have less impact than the others on settled areas of the coast highway.

Environmentalists told Hydro officials during a recent meeting at Pender Harbor that they are opposed to the route because it will mar approaches to recreational areas, pass through the Sunshine Coast's major domestic watershed as well as a number of small parks and conflict with private land uses.

Robertson said Hydro will make the decision on the route for the line as soon as it feels sufficient information has been gathered. The objective will be to put the line where it will have the least impact, he said.

"We are not going to be able to please everybody."

Monahan says there is no justification for the line based on the development forecasts for the Island. he says Hydro doesn't foresee any large-scale industrial growth for the area.

Some speculate that Hydro is planning a large-coal generating plant or even a nuclear station on the Island and will need the line to ship the power back to the mainland.

"We just want to know what is going on," Monahan says.

Whether Lasqueti will be on the route eventually chosen for the line won't be known until after the second Beak report comes out but Monahan says Hydro's basic emphasis is on the island.

The corporation always says it is studying other alternatives, Monahan said, but the islanders feel this is only to keep the critics from the door.

The Lasqueti people are concerned about what effect land clearing will have on their water supply which is all surface water. They are also worried about herbicides being used as defoliants and getting into the water.

"We want to be guaranteed that it is not harmful," he said, adding that the residents want to be told that if it is harmful, Hydro will monitor the water supply.

"Hydro does have a moral responsibility to see that its actions do not cause harm."

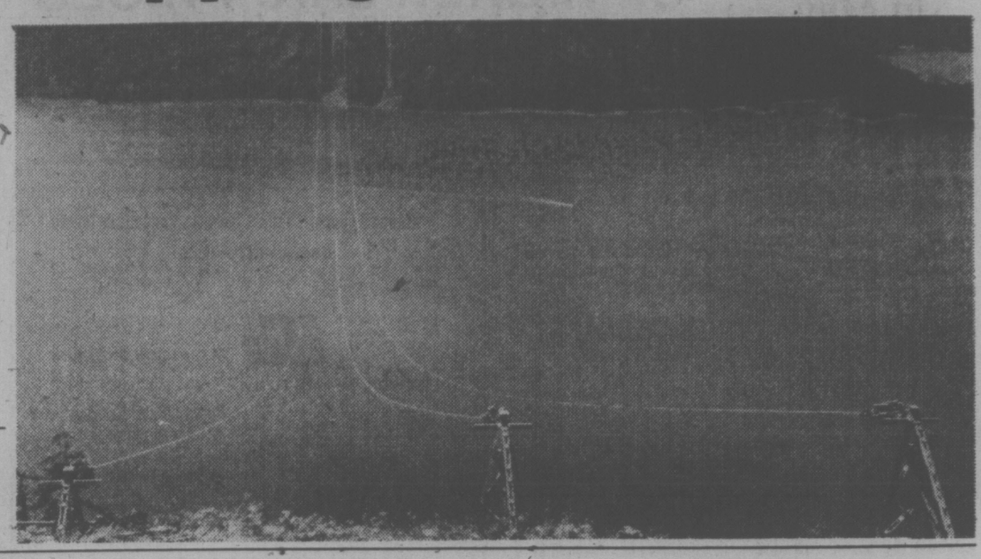

Some question the health hazards of 500 kilovolt lines. Robertson says Hydro stays on top of any research in this area but is not conducting any of its own. Ontario Hydro, along with the University of Toronto, has launched a study of the potential health hazards to those close to such high-voltage lines and the study is supposed to be released next month.

Don Lockstead, the NDP MLA for MacKenzie, which includes much of the mainland portion of the proposed route also supports a two-year moratorium on the line.

He said Hydro has not discounted a report that Beak's total ground survey of the route area amounted to 10 hours of helicopter time.

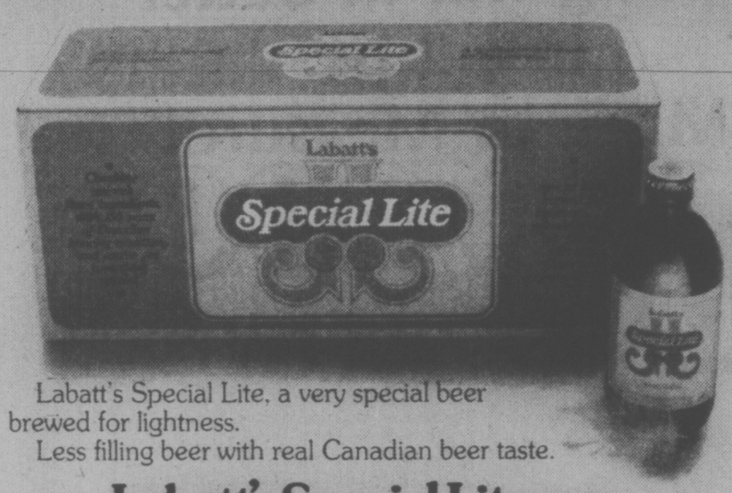

He also said Hydro is not able to say where the increased growth is going to come on the Island in order to justify putting in such a line.

The MLA says he has "a faint hope" that Hydro will reconsider its plans.

HYDRO'S proposal for an aerial crossing of Sechelt Inlet on the mainland is also causing concern.

The Litton/Moffat "Vari-Cook Control" Micro-Wave

Slow-Cooked Goodness at Microwave Speed

Like most products, some Microwave ovens are better than others. Until recently most of them cooked at just one, or two speeds. So foods like tougher cuts of meat that need longer roasting to be tender, were a failure. Then Litton/Moffat introduced the "Vari-Cook" control. Vari-cook is like the temperature control on your oven. You can set it just where you like. To simmer, roast, reheat, defrost — or just keep something warm. So now you can simmer a stew, or gently cook a custard. Sear a roast or scramble an egg. All the real cooking the early ovens couldn't manage. The new Litton/Moffat "Vari-Cook" really does "Bring back old-fashioned slow-cooked goodness — at microwave speeds."

- Vari-Cook* even control
- 45 minute rotary timer
- Easy-clean acrylic interior with sealed-in shelf
